CRUSADE AGAINST SMUT

Members of Happiness of Womanhood, Inc., of San Diego, burned copies of newspapers they considered objectionable during a "smut cleaning" campaign through city streets. The group bought numerous newspapers from vending machines, tore them up and later burned them.

Prosecutor says, 'have everything that we wanted'

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Copies of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's personal records were turned over voluntarily today to federal prosecutors investigating political corruption in Maryland.

"We have in our possession a complete copy of his records," U.S. Attorney George Beall said. "Our people picked up the records first thing this morning."

"As far as I know, the records contain all that we requested," Beall said.

Beall had asked Agnew for his personal records covering the time he was governor of Maryland, and the vice president responded in a letter that federal investigators would be able to examine all his personal records.

Asked if he would accept Agnew's offer of a face-to-face meeting with the vice president, Beall would not comment other than to say he was aware of the offer.

A federal grand jury is investigating allegations that Agnew accepted kickbacks from political contractors while he was governor of Maryland. He labeled these as "damned lies" in an Aug. 8 news conference.

Beall said he did not see any prosecution problems because Agnew's records were obtained informally, without subpoena. He added that any constitutional questions in connection with the investigation "are for (Agnew's) side to raise."

Gov. Marvin Mandel, the Democrat who succeeded Agnew in 1969, said the criminal investigation started as a political "vendetta against Democrats in retaliation for the Watergate scandal, but it backfired."

State trims sales tax, OKs income tax cuts

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan rode the crest of victory today as the Democratic-controlled legislature approved his plan to reduce the sales tax for six months starting Oct. 1 and provide a major income tax cut in April.

The proposal, originally offered June 29 by Reagan as a last minute compromise and rejected by Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti and other Democrats, would:

—Roll back to five cents on the dollar the unnecessary one penny sales tax increase which took effect July 1 and use up $324 million of the state's unprecedented $826 million tax surplus.

—Grant income taxpayers a one-time reduction on returns filed next April 15, ranging from 20 per cent in the wealthy brackets to 35 per cent in the lower brackets. This would consume about $380 million of the surplus.

"Better late than never," grinned Reagan. Aides said he would sign the bill next week.

The measure (SB90) by Sen. Ralph Dills, D-Gardena, cleared the Assembly on an overwhelming 73-2 vote Thursday and the Senate on a rare unanimous 31-0 vote two hours later.

The measure, which undercuts and supercedes the 20 per cent rebate proposed in the governor's tax limitation initiative, would provide a typical family of four earning $15,000 a $60 tax cut. The same family earning $25,000 would save $137 while that family earning $50,000 would save $583.

The sales tax increase (which raised the levy to 6½ cents in the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District counties) took effect when Reagan and the legislature failed to agree on how to delay it even though the state had stockpiled the huge surplus.

Dills asserted during floor debate that the measure would trigger "the greatest tax cut and rebate in the history of the state of California or any other state in the Union."

Others, however, countered that the tax increase should never have been allowed to occur in the first place and should be repealed for good.

In the Assembly, Robert Beverly of Manhattan Beach, Republican floor leader, said the legislature should have accepted the proposal six weeks ago and the lawmakers "could have at least improved our image."

"It's a little silly to see a tax increase go into effect July 1 and then have a reduction Oct. 1," he said.

Oregon governor taken from hospital after nitro found

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Oregon Gov. Tom McCall was evacuated Thursday night from his room at the University of Oregon Medical School after a large container of nitroglycerine was found one floor below his room.

The bottle—10½ inches by two and one-half inches—was found by Gertrude Simpson—a janitor—in a ladies rest room on the ninth floor.

She called the hospital security officer who in turn called state police who removed the object to Camp Withycomb in Clackamas County.

The governor was transferred with his personal physician Dr. Ralph Purvine.

State police said the explosive was found in a frozen state but was thawing when discovered.

McCall was hospitalized for inflamation of the genito-urinary tract.

He underwent surgery July 24 for removal of prostate gland which was found malignant.

Ron Schmidt, the governor's assistant, said McCall was taken by ambulance to an undisclosed place in the state. Schmidt also said the chemical was found in "explosive form" and was not used in that form or container by the hospital.

Schmidt said there have been no recent threats on the affable governor's life.

The cleaning woman said she found the suspicious object atop a towel dispenser in the 9th floor ladies rest room Thursday evening.

She became alarmed and called the hospital security officer, Wayne Petterson, who examined the cylindrical device.

He decided it might be a bomb and called the state police bomb squad. Then he alerted the nursing staff on the 10th floor. The governor was immediately moved to another floor, then away from the hospital as the ninth floor area was cleared. By 7:18 p.m. state trooper Bill Fettig arrived, examined the device and removed it. It was taken to the state police school at Camp Whitycomb.

By 9:15 p.m. state police announced the device contained nitro glycerine.

The whole 10th floor on which McCall was located was cleared and the governor expressed concern about other patients.

Prices rising at record pace; economy drops

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The economy cooled dramatically between April and June while prices rose at the highest rate in 22 years, the government said today.

In a revised report on the Gross National Product (GNP), the Commerce Department said the economy expanded at an annual rate of 2.4 per cent in the second quarter compared to 8.7 per cent in January-March.

A preliminary GNP report issued by the department last month put the April-June growth rate at a 2.6 per cent rate but administration economists said statistical quirks had pushed the figure far too low.

They contended that the economy was much healthier than the figures indicated and the the revised report, using more up-to-date statistics, would bear this out.

But the first report proved to be just about on target.

President Nixon claims

Courts lack power to force tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon claimed in federal court today that the judicial branch of government has no power to reverse his position that the public interest requires him to keep secret White House tapes of his conversations about the Watergate scandal.

The President's latest views on the controversy were spelled out by his lawyers in a 16-page brief filed in U.S. District Court in response to a request by Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox for a court order to compel Nixon to surrender selected portions of the tape recorded material.

Citing various rulings by the Supreme Court and lower courts to support the President's position, his lawyers said in the brief:

"The court may tell the executive that it is to produce (material in question), but if the executive chooses not to do so, it is free to make that choice and the only power in the court is to dismiss the prosecution."

Nixon's lawyers noted that Cox, in seeking the tapes, had contended that the federal grand jury investigating Watergate would not be able to function effectively unless it was given access to the recordings.

The President contended that he —and future Presidents — would not be able to function efficiently if he yielded to subpoenas for the tapes, and argued that the public interest demands that the tapes be kept secret.

The brief said it long had been established generally that "it is exclusively for the executive branch, and not for the courts, to decide whether other governmental interests outweigh the interest in a particular criminal prosecution."

"If there be any authority for the proposition that the courts have power to determine that the requirements of justice make it necessary that a prosecution continue, though the executive branch has determined to the contrary on the basis of other governmental interests, we are unaware of it, the special prosecutor has not cited it, and it would be in the teeth of the authorities here cited," Nixon's lawyers declared.

Sniper's bullet kills follower of Cesar Chavez

LAMONT, Calif. (UPI) — One of the original followers of United Farm Workers Union leader Cesar Chavez was killed by sniper's gunfire Thursday as he left the picket line at a table grape ranch.

Chavez, visibly shaken by the slaying, said that if such violence continued he would call off all pickets in the San Joaquin Valley. "We're not going to have our people shot," he said as he toured the area.

The UFW was striking 28 ranches which recently signed contracts with the Teamsters Union. The two unions are locked in a battle for farm worker representation.

Juan Delacruz, who had worked for Chavez since 1965, died at Kern General Hospital in Bakersfield where he was taken after a slug ripped into his chest near his heart. Two Filipino workers, Bayani Advincula, 20, and Ernest Baclig, 64, were arrested after witnesses reported the license number of the sniper car.

This was the first fatality near a struck ranch in the union struggle. However, on Wednesday a UFW member died from injuries suffered when he became engaged in a scuffle with a Kern County Sheriff's deputy outside a tavern here.

Chavez also called for a three-day fast by union members on Monday to repudiate violence.

Four area men arrested as ton of marijuana seized

SAN BERNARDINO — Federal and state narcotics officers have arrested four West End men and seized nearly one ton of marijuana with a street value of over $300,000 smuggled into the United States from Mexico, according to a San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department spokesman.

Capt. Charles Follett said agents believe that the arrests of the West End men may have cracked one of the major narcotics operations for smuggling marijuana from Mexico into the United States. Four other men have been arrested in Mexico by Mexican authorities in connection with the smuggling ring.

In federal custody for investigation of conspiracy to commit smuggling of marijuana are: William Clifford Jackson, 23, of Upland; Lee Michael George, 22, of Ontario; Barry Richard Hill, 26, of Chino; and Donald Charles Kenyon, 23, of Alta Loma.

Follett said the investigation was carried out in Mexico, Palm Springs, Alta Loma, and Soggy Dry Lake.

He said that investigators learned of the smuggling operation when an undercover agent infiltrated the organization as a pilot. The agent pilot was approached by a member of the smuggling operation, who asked him to fly a ton of marijuana from Mexico to the landing strip at Soggy Dry Lake.

The plane was to begin its journey from Palm Springs because of favorable weather conditions there. At 4:30 a.m. Thursday, agents in Palm Springs arrested Jackson.

Shortly after Jackson's arrest, Mexican and U.S. agents arrested four Mexican citizens at an airstrip and seized nearly a ton of marijuana with a street value of $320,000 in the United States. The names of the Mexican citizens involved in the smuggling operation have not been released.

Follett said one of the Mexicans arrested is wanted by both Mexican and U.S. authorities for prior narcotics activities and is known to be a major connection there.

From Palm Springs federal agents then flew the plane to Soggy Dry Lake, where they were met by a man who was to transport the marijuana to Kenyon's address in Alta Loma. The man waiting for the agents was identified as George.

The agents then drove George's van to the Alta Loma address, where they were to be met by George and another man. Also arrested at the Alta Loma address was Hill.

Follett said Hill was to take the marijuana to an unknown location.

Follett added that a number of other arrests in the smuggling operation are expected.

Involved in the smuggling investigation were agents of the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration, a Mexico City drug enforcement task force; the San Bernardino County narcotics task force, the State Bureau of Narcotics Investigation, the Riverside Regional Integrated Narcotics Task Enforcement Team and the Palm Springs Police Department.

Nixon plans public talks to shift focus from Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon intends to embark on a series of public appearances in an effort to refocus national attention on major domestic and foreign policy problems away from Watergate.

Nixon will use as a springboard his address before the 74th annual convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in New Orleans Monday.

After a brief stop there, he will fly on to San Clemente, Calif., for a prolonged stay through Labor Day. Aides said Nixon will be "busy" as he seeks to recoup his standing in the popularity polls, now down to the lowest level of his presidency.

In California, he will hold his first press conference in five months. Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren commented that Nixon already has expressed his "views" and "perceptions" about Watergate, which may indicate he will not be receptive to questions about the scandal.

But other White House officials are encouraging the view that Nixon may be willing to be quizzed in depth on the subject for the first time.

The President appeared to be in a jauntier, more confident mood after his Wednesday night televised address on Watergate than he has in recent months. Aides indicated his spirits were lifted by wires and telephone calls to the White House after the speech. The White House announced they were running 5 or 6 to 1 in his favor.

A theme of the speech was that the Senate Watergate hearings were absorbed in trying to "implicate" the President and should be ended and the matter left to the courts.

The committee chairman, Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., told a Chamber of Commerce luncheon in North Carolina Thursday "I deeply regret that the President entertains the idea that the committee wants to get him. The committee only wants to get the truth."

POW bracelets are poured into mold

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — The melted remains of more than 6,000 prisoner of war bracelets were poured Thursday into a monument honoring the nation's killed and missing in the Indochina War.

An Air Force color guard saluted and a crowd of about 50, mostly relatives of missing servicemen, applauded quietly as the 250 pounds of metal were poured into a mold at the Spokane steel foundry.

The four-foot circular monument will be transported to Valley Forge, Pa., where it will be formally dedicated in about two months by the Freedom Foundation.

Injuries prove fatal

LOMA LINDA (UPI) — Charles Hooper, 35, Riverside, died Thursday in Loma Linda Medical Center of injuries suffered Monday in the explosion of an air compressor he was installing in a mobile home in Corona.

Government delays new price rules

Service stations threaten to protest by closing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With service station operators in several parts of the country threatening to close in protest, the government has delayed until Sept. 1 the start of new price rules for gasoline and diesel fuel.

The present price freeze on gasoline and diesel fuel remains in effect until then.

But the freeze ends and new price regulations begin for all other petroleum products at midnight Sunday as scheduled.

Midnight Sunday had been the deadline also for gasoline and No. 2 diesel fuel. The two-week delay was announced Thursday by John T. Dunlop, head of the administration's Cost of Living Council.

New ceilings

The new Phase IV regulations, when they do finally take effect for service stations will involve new price ceilings based on the seller's actual cost plus his profit markup—in dollars and cents, not percentage—as of Jan. 10, 1973.

Many retail dealers complain that this profit provision will mean money out of their pockets and that thousands of them will be forced out of business.

Robert Jacobs, an official of both the Illinois and Indiana gasoline dealers associations, said in Chicago Thursday he expected 90 per cent of the service stations in the Chicago area to shut down in protest Aug. 24-26, with signs reading: "This Station Closed By U.S. Government Bungling."

Close all week

Dealers in Michigan had voted to close all next week. A Pennsylvania association planned to shut down over Labor Day weekend. Jacobs said directors of gasoline associations nationwide would meet in Houston, Tex., this weekend and would be asked to lend their support to shutdowns.

These plans were made before Dunlop's announcement of the delay, and it was not immediately clear how this would affect them.

Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker Thursday denied a request by brand name gas station owners to exempt them from Phase IV controls. He gave as his reason the fact that these controls were not yet in effect.

The station owners from Georgia and Michigan, who had filed a class action suit on behalf of all such operators, said they would try again at a future date. They claim they are the only small businessmen not exempt from Phase IV.

Dunlop's office said the delay was to give companies time to compute allowable ceiling prices and service station operators time to post octane and price information on every gasoline pump.

Faces 5-year prison term

Magruder pleads guilty to conspiring in scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jeb Stuart Magruder, a key aide in President Nixon's campaign last year, says he feels "comfortable" after pleading guilty to conspiracy in the Watergate affair.

"I feel as good as you can under the circumstances," Magruder said Thursday a short time after he entered the plea in U.S. District Court. "I decided it was best to plead guilty to the charges as stated, and I feel comfortable having done so."

The charges against Magruder accused him of conspiring to tap the telephones of the Democratic National Committee, hampering the investigation, concealing evidence and lying under oath. The information filed against Magruder by special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox also accused him of taking part in a conspiracy to "misrepresent that the Central Intelligence Agency had an interest in limiting the investigation."

Magruder, 38, who was deputy director of the Nixon reelection committee in 1972, stood at parade rest as he entered his plea before Chief U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

"I plead guilty," Magruder said in a quiet voice.

Sirica postponed indefinitely the sentencing of Magruder and released him on his own recognizance.

Magruder was the second high Nixon campaign official to plead guilty to conspiracy charges. The first was Frederick C. LaRue, an aide to campaign director John N. Mitchell, who entered his plea June 27.

Both LaRue and Magruder will be government witnesses at forthcoming Watergate trials. Sirica said he would not sentence either man until the trials are over.

Conspiracy carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison, a $1,000 fine or both.

James F. Neal, an assistant to Cox, said the prosecutor had decided to accept Magruder's plea to a single conspiracy count instead of indicting him on other charges because Magruder had come to prosecutors voluntarily in April to spell out his role in the scandal.

"Of course, if you're going to have a trial, you've got to have witnesses," Neal told reporters.

Indictments against other figures in the case are not expected for several more weeks.

Violent convicts are increasing

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Male inmates in California's state prisons are more likely to have been sentenced for crimes of violence than their counterparts 10 years ago, according to the Department of Corrections.

Some 52 per cent of the state's present 16,000 male inmate population was sent to prison for crimes of homicide, robbery, assault and rape, the department reported Thursday, while a decade ago the offenses accounted for only 35 per cent.

Other statistics released by the department showed:

—Today's inmates are younger. The present median age age is 30 years with 21.9 per cent under 25. In 1963 the median was 32 with 18.4 per cent under 25.

— Blacks, Mexican-Americans and other minorities make up 50.2 per cent of today's prisoners in the state, while in 1963 minorities accounted for only 44.3 per cent.

Tiburon townhouse area

Developer, residents differ over swim pool

By LENORE WALLACE
P-B Staff Writer

SAN DIMAS — Residents of the Tiburon townhouse development turned down three plans by the developer Thursday night when the two sides meet to try to settle grievences over a third swimming pool which homeowners say was promised to them.

About 30 residents of the development met with representatives of the Southern California Larwin Inc. to hash over a list of complaints that the homeowners presented to the City Council Monday night.

The major concern to residents is a third swimming pool which they say was promised to them by salesmen when they purchased their units.

Plans filed with the city show only two pools for the development which at completion will have 260 units. Residents started moving in the development in May when 56 of the first units were completed.

Near Bonelli Park

The development is located in a scenic area off Puddinstone Drive and near Bonelli Park. Units sell in the $33,000 to $39,000 price range.

Robert L. Perlberg, vice president of consumer affairs for Larwin, told residents who gathered in the recreation center of the complex, that the developer had no intention at any time to construct a third pool within the complex and information that a third pool would be built was a "misunderstanding" and had caused great confusion.

He apologized to the residents for this resulting misunderstanding.

Perlberg said the developer had intended to build a 25 to 50 foot pool as the second pool but as a compromise solution, Larwin would construct a 35 to 75 foot pool with a clubhouse and other facilities similar to those now existing in the recreation area at the entrance to the development.

This would be constructed in an area across from the existing recreation center. He also offered two other alternate plans for consideration because he said the developer was "very anxious to settle the misunderstanding."

Second plan

His second plan offered to construct two pools side by side each 25 by 50 feet and a clubhouse and also a 150 by 90-foot green area, all across from the existing recreation center.

Perlberg said as a third alternative the developer would consider a plan which would place one of the two pools in the 150 by 90 green area. This would put some space between the two pools. He said one of the pools could be constructed with shallow depths for youngsters if the residents desired this.

But the residents voted to reject all of the plans and instead offered their own solution to the controversy a solution they say was promised to them when they purchased their homes.

The homeowners want the developer to place one 25 by 50 foot pool across from the present recreation center and another of the same size some blocks away at the northerly end of the development near Rosewood Court.

Perlberg said he would discuss the plan with company officials and would notify residents of the outcome.

Officials in Chile move to avert national strikes

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Troops armed with rifles and submachine guns, backing a government vow to seize 45,000 idled vehicles in a 23-day-old nationwide truck strike, requisitioned 1,500 of the strikebound trucks Thursday night in a remote field outside Santiago.

But the government of President Salvador Allende faced a new, and potentially more serious, crisis today in the form of a threatened shutdown by small businessmen supporting the strikers.

The trucks were seized without incident Thursday night, but only after heavily armed troops and opposition congressmen persuaded truckers and their families to abandon a field in Puente Alto, about 12 miles south of Santiago, where the vehicles had been parked.

On alert

The soldiers were put on alert, however, to guard against possible incidents from the truckers and their families. Wives of the strikers occupied four radio stations Wednesday and broadcast appeals on behalf of their husbands.

The vehicle seizure intensified the political crisis Allende has said could lead to civil war. Personnel at the U.S. embassy remained on an evacuation alert ordered Wednesday after pipe bombs were discovered and dismantled in the driveways of three embassy employes.

Trucks seized

Troops seized the trucks after the owner-drivers ignored an ultimatum to end their walkout by 4 p.m. Thursday. Allende swore he would requisition all 45,000 idled vehicles unless the strikers complied with the order.

The strike has paralyzed truck transportation and has threatened vital parts of the Chilean economy, already beset by grave difficulties.

Truckers had let out the air from most of the tires of the trucks seized Thursday and removed engine parts to make the vehicles inoperable. The army said the trucks will eventually be towed to Santiago after court authorization is obtained.

Immediate reaction

Reaction to the seizure was immediate. The Small Businessman's Association put its quarter million members on a "strike alert" in support of the walkout. Last October, owners of retail shops and other merchant groups joined a truckers' walkout that lasted 26 days at an estimated loss of $200 million to the economy.

Allende accused opposition political parties of masterminding the walkout. "They are endangering the foundations of the state," he said.

The truckers struck July 26 for higher pay, easier access to spare parts and new vehicles. The government claims it has already met these demands.

$60 million deal questioned

Indian tribe skeptical of land payoff from U.S.

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (UPI) — Annabelle Bates will believe it when she sees a $100,000 check in the mailbox— and not before.

Edison Chiloquin doesn't want to see such a check—and plans to tear it up if he gets one.

Helen Merritt shrugs her shoulders and hopes it's all for the best.

They are three of the 600 members of the Klamath Indian tribe who will share about $60 million under terms of a bill signed Thursday by President Nixon.

The law allows the federal government to buy 136,000 acres of valuable forest lands owned by the Indians for addition to the Winema National Forest. The price is expected to be in the neighborhood of $60 million.

It will be shared by some 600 Indians who own 473 shares in a timberland trust set up in 1961 by members of the tribe who refused to accept $57,000 apiece for their portions of the Klamath's lands. Some 2,100 other tribal members agreed to the termination price at that time.

The shareholders voted in 1969 to dissolve the trust, partly because of a smaller-than-expected return and partly in hopes of wresting control of the land back from the bank handling the trust. Instead, the bank put the land up for sale and Oregon congressmen intervened to keep it in federal ownership.

Mrs. Bates, one of the shareholders, has made no plans and won't until she has a check in her hand.

"It's hard to believe you'll really get it until you see it," she explained. "There is a great feeling among the Indians, especially the older ones, that the Indian is going to get gypped anyway."

Chiloquin, grandson of the Indian for whom the small hamlet of Chiloquin, Ore., was named, doesn't want to leave the land of his ancestors.

"I know I'm not going to take the money," he said. "It's like selling my people ... my dead people. I think this land is all-important to a guy . . . Whatever happens, the Indians are going to come out on the short end of the stick."

Mrs. Merritt, who was unhappy about the trustee arrangement and voted to sell the land, hopes it will benefit younger members of the tribe.

"Our reservation land..." she started to say, then paused. "I don't know how to say it. The land is practically useless now because our children have growed up on the streets of every town. They have had movie houses, dance halls. And they learned that kind of life. They never knew what it was like to live on the farms, on the reservation. They learned to live in the streets."

State reduces...

only two "no" votes, blistered the bill.

Bagley warned if Reagan's tax limitation initiative is passed on Nov. 6 by the voters, the state's revenue base automatically would be cut by $600 million and this would necessitate massive budget cuts.

Murphy, GOP caucus chairman, deplored the bill as "atrocious" because the income Californians would save in tax credits April 15 would be considered extra income for federal tax purposes. He said citizens would be paying at least $100 million more in federal income taxes.

The bill also eliminates from taxation the income of a married couple earning $8,000 and single persons earning $4,000.

The maximum 35 per cent credit would be granted to couples earning $8,000-$15,000; couples earning $15,000-$20,000 would receive the 30 per cent rebate; those earning $20,000-$25,000 would receive the 30 per cent rebate; those earning $20,000-$25,000 would get 25 per cent cuts while those earning more than $25,000 would be granted a 20 per cent reduction.

Moretti, a member of the conference committee which recommended the governor's plan, called it "better by far" than the one-time 20 per cent income tax reduction contained in the initiative because it does more for middle and lower income taxpayers.

Reagan has toured the state seeking support for his tax limitation plan and stressing the 20 per cent reduction as well as a permanent 7.5 per cent income tax cut. The latter is unaffected by the bill.

"This obviously will take some of the wind out of the initiative," Bagley remarked.

A top administration fiscal adviser, who asked not to be identified, agreed that "we now will not be able to advertise the 20 per cent rebate, but we'll be asking, 'Why didn't the legislature approve the plan earlier?'"

Adm. Radford, in 3 wars, dies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retired Adm. Arthur W. Radford, who commanded the U.S. Pacific Fleet during the Korean War and later served two terms as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, died today at Bethesda Naval Hospital. He was 77.

Radford was a veteran of World Wars I and II as well as the Korean conflict.

Born in Chicago Feb. 27, 1896, he graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1916. During World War I, he served aboard the battleship South Carolina in the Atlantic.

Mystery surrounds death of war author

HONOLULU (UPI) — Police tried to determine Thursday the cause of the death of famed war correspondent Richard Tregaskis, the author of "Guadalcanal Diary."

Tregaskis' body was found floating face down off a beach park late Wednesday. He was 56.

Indications were that drowning was the cause of death but police learned he had suffered complications from diabetes.

Tregaskis, who started his journalism career as a high school sports writer at the age of 15, became one of the best-known war correspondents of World War II. He landed on Guadalcanal with the first wave of U.S. Marines and later wrote "Guadalcanal Diary," which was made into a movie still frequently seen on television.

Tregaskis also covered the Vietnam conflict and wrote "Vietnam Diary" in 1963.

He was a prolific writer and authored at least ten books, including "John F. Kennedy and PT-109," and three screen plays, among them "Fair Wind to Java."

Plainclothesmen kept reporters and photographers away from the prince.

Full trial possible in Kennedy accident

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI) — A lawyer for 21-year-old Joseph Kennedy III says there may be a "full trial" Monday on charges that the son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy was driving recklessly when three persons were hurt in a car crash on Nantucket this week.

The youth's brother, David, 18, sprained his back in the one-car accident and 18-year-old Pamela Kelley suffered spinal injuries that have left her at least temporarily paralyzed below the waist. Another girl suffered a fractured pelvis.

When completed it will make Griswold's the largest inn between Los Angeles and San Bernardino. Architect is Willis K. Hutchason of Los Angeles. Contractor is Swen Larson of Redlands. In the background is a three-story wing of motel rooms completed in 1971.

New students to register in Claremont

CLAREMONT — Claremont Unified School District will register students new to the district Aug. 29, 30 and 31 from 9 a.m to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

The first day of school for all students in the Claremont Unified School District will be Tuesday, Sept. 11.

There will be no buses for Claremont Unified School District students this year with the exception of Danbury orthopedically handicapped students.

The district expects 300 kindergarteners and a total of 6,580 children to begin the school year.

Orientation for freshmen at Claremont High will be held Friday, Sept. 7 at 9 a.m.

MSAC gets real bargain: $17,000 in beef for $5,108

WALNUT — Mt. San Antonio College acquired 44 head of cattle in a windfall Thursday, for about $120 apiece. But the animals won't be used to augment the college's food fare.

The board of trustees approved the purchase from Thomas E. Leavey, a wealthy Los Angeles insurance executive.

The cattle — 20 cows, four heifers, 19 calves and a bull — were brought to the college farm four years ago through an agreement by which the students and personnel would maintain and care for them and study them and Leavey would pay for some of the upkeep.

James Simpson, vice president of the college's business services, told the board that Leavey's representatives contacted the colleges last month and offered to sell the herd for one half of its value.

An evaluation showed the cattle were worth $17,000 alive and $13,500 "liquidated," Simpson said.

After deducting current unpaid bills, the college offered Leavey $5,108 for the herd. The offer was accepted. The college will now use the herd to make its breeding program permanent.

There is only one reservation. With a shortage of beef and the price of meat so high, the college has now begun to worry about possible cattle rustling.

Griswold's Inn is adding 82 more rooms

CLAREMONT — Work has begun on the final increment of Griswold's Inn at 555 W. Foothill Blvd., a project estimated at $2 million when A. L. Sanford, president of Griswold's Restaurants, Inc., and city officials broke ground on the structure in October 1967.

Construction workers have started building the third and final wing of hotel rooms — a $1 million, three-story structure to contain 82 deluxe rooms as well as conference and banquet rooms.

Sanford said that the addition will give the inn 188 rooms and make it the largest hotel between Los Angeles and San Bernardino.

The city Architectural Commission approved the site plan, elevations, colors and materials for the 29,000-square-foot facility north of the first wing of 44 rooms built in 1967.

By 1971 Griswold's had added a wing of rooms north of the restaurant, and that increased the room total to 106.

Sanford said that the new wing will have the same architectural design as the present buildings, and maintain the same color and material schedule which includes red tile roof, beige stucco, and dark wood beams.

Girder foils suicide try

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Elizabeth Paro left a suicide note in her car, walked onto Golden Gate Bridge, climbed the railing and leaped. She landed on a girder 15 inches below sidewalk level.

A passing motorist notified the California Highway Patrol and officers found the stunned woman still lying on the girder. With the help of bridge employes, they pulled her to safety with a life line.

Miss Paro, 30, San Francisco, was taken to San Francisco General Hospital for observation.

Census figures differ

Claremont loses out on tax revenue funds

CLAREMONT — "Anyone for another census?" was a question being posed this week by Deputy City Manger Norman King.

"Various governmental agencies credit our city," King said, "with five different population estimates, all of which have some sort of monetary implication on the city's budget."

King said that the city may have lost $20,000 in various state and federal revenues because of an error made by U.S. census takers in 1970.

King said that the city is appealing the U.S. Department of the Treasury use of 23,464 as the city's population on April 1, 1970, for revenue-sharing calculations.

King explained that the figure was corrected ater to 24,000 when city officials pointed out that all of the Claremont Colleges are in Claremont and Los Angeles County and nor partly in San Bernardino County as the census bureau originally had thought.

King said that the city has lost about $10,000 in state gas tax, motor vehicle in lieu, and cigarette tax funds forever because corrected errors are not retroactive.

King reported that the population research division of the state Department of Finance this week informed him that as of April 1, 1973, the city's population was 24,350, a decrease of 550 persons the past year from an origianl figure of 24,900.

King also reported that Director Vern Orr of the Department of Finance indicated in a letter a 2.24 per cent increase, but a check of the letter showed that it should have been a decrease.

The deputy city manager said that county officials have explained that because of a change in calculating population, many cities, particularly those in Los Angeles County, will show a decreased population because the total population of those cities and of unincorporated areas substantially exceeded the estimate of county and state populations.

County officials chose to adjust city popuations downward rather than change the county and state estimates, King commented.

He said that despite new residential development which brought in at least 100 new residents during the past year, the city's official population in the eyes of the Department of Finance will remain at 24,900 unless city officials certify the lower number of 24,350.

King said that the city may have lost $10,000 in revenue sharing funds unless the Department of the Treasury clarifies the city's population with the Census Bureau.

Noted author drowns off Honolulu beach

HONOLULU (UPI) — Police today identified the body of a man pulled from the waters of Ala Moana Beach Park late Wednesday as that of Richard Tregaskis, veteran war correspondent and noted author.

Tregaskis, 56, was discovered face-down in the water.

Tregaskis, who covered nine wars, including the battlefields of Europe, the Mediterranean, Southeast Asia and the Pacific, was noted for his "Guadalcanal Diary," and award-winning "Vietnam Diary."

Burt hearings continued to Sept. 4

SAN BERNARDINO — Probation hearings and sentencing for a Northern California couple convicted of second-degree murder in the slaying of a Chino prison guard during the escape of Ronald Wayne Beaty has been continued to Sept. 4.

The hearings and sentencing for Benton Douglas Burt, 30, and his wife Andrea Holman Burt, 19, were scheduled for Thursday before Superior Court Judge Thomas M. Haldorsen, but were continued on the agreement of the Burts' defense attorney, Charles Garry, and Deputy Dist. Atty. Joe Canty.

The defense and prosecuting attorneys asked for more time to prepare information and rebuttal to a motion for mistrial filed by Garry. Garry has asked for a mistrial, accusing the jury of misconduct during the three-month trail, Canty with misconduct in questioning witnesses and final argument, and Judge Haldorsen of erroneous legal ruings.

The Burts were convicted of second-degree murder, assault with a deadly weapon and rescuing a prisoner on July 18 by a Superior Court jury. The jury found that the Burts had taken part in the Oct. 6 ambush of a state prison car, the fatal shooting of Correctional Officer Jesus Sanchez, the wounding of Correctional Officer George Fitzgerald, and the freeing of CIM inmate Ronald Beaty.

Wettest spot in world? It's in Hawaii

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The wettest place in the world is in the United States.

It's 5,148-foot high Mt. Waialeale (pronounced why-ah-layah-lay) on the Hawaiian island of Kauai. It receives an average 451 inches of rain a year.

The U.S. Geological Survey said today it has been measuring rainfall on the peak since 1911, and the record rainfall for any year was 624 inches in 1948. There is only about 15 days a year when it does not rain on Mt. Waialeale.

There have been other spots in the world with more rainfall in one year (the world's record was 905.12 inches that fell on Cherrapunji, India in 1861), but over the long haul none of them quite match Mt. Waialeale's precipitation year after year.

Mortgage funds declining

Buyers of homes shackled by high rates, tight money

A home buyer who postponed purchasing a $35,000, single-family home from June to August will pay another $3,600 for the decision, the chief economist of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board estimates.

Harris C. Friedman, asked about rising mortgage rates, said Thursday the two-month delay may have hit the potential home buyer worse by forcing him competely out of the market because of the tight mortgage money supply.

Despite increases in state usury ceilings in recent months and higher interest charges in states without ceilings, Friedman said, money available for mortgages declined by more than $1 bilion in July and August.

That outflow of savings funds had the potential of eliminating financing for 30,000 homes.

Federal and state agencies have raised usury ceilings to attract larger shares of the shrinking mortgage funds. New York and New Jersey raised their mortgage ceilings to 8 per cent in recent weeks, and the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration increased their maximums to 7¾ per cent.

"I don't think it's going to do any good," Friedman said in an interview, citing many states such as California and Virginia which have no usury ceilings.

The "real mortgage market" is between 9 and 9-½ per cent, Friedman said. Home buyers in areas with rates below 9 per cent can secure a mortgage, he said, only if they make "substantial" down payments, are important bank savers or work with real estate brokers who are good bank customers.

Bank officials in Buffalo and Albany, N.Y., said Thursday that they are lending mortgage money only at 8 per cent rates and down payments of about one third, compared to 10 and 20 per cent in June.

Savings and loan officials in Washington, D..C, and Maryland, which have 8 per cent ceilings, have virtually frozen commitments this month. Maryland and Washington money is going to Virginia, which has no ceiling, one official said.

In Michigan, where rates range from 7-¾ to 8-½ per cent, banking officials said mortgage money has been available, although there are suggestions of tightening. William W. Dwire, vice president of the National Bank of Detroit, said the volume of mortgage requests increased 25 per cent in June and again in July, "which is quite alarming, and indicates to us many other lenders are out of money or estabished rates so high their customers are coming to us now."

The Cook County, Ill., Council of Insured Savings is granting a few mortgages at 8 per cent, while in Okahoma 8 per cent loans are availabe only with 20 per cent or higher down payments. Most Oklahoma and Arkansas loans are going at 8⅝ to 8¾ per cent.

Friedman said the net effect has been that a $35,000 home with a $30,000 mortgage bought in June would cost the buyer $72,000 for principal and interest over 30 years. Now, the same $30,000 mortgage costs $75,600 over 25 years, he said.

There is an added irritant for the August home buyer, Friedman said. More than $1 billion available for mortgages in June has been withdrawn from savings accounts.

$250,000 mission fails

Diving team ends treasure quest

FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (UPI) — A team of divers Thursday abandoned its month-long quest to recover $2 milion in riches believed aboard the luxury liner Andrea Doria, which sank 17 years ago when it collided with the Swedish vessel Stockholm, killing 51 persons.

The recovery mission, which cost at least $250,000, was abruptly ended Thursday when a trio of divers who had managed to cut into the sunken vessel two days earlier found access to the ship's purser's office all but impossible.

"One long wall was badly bucked and there was a lot of wreckage in there—twisted steel and wooden beams," support diver Tim Keley said. "We decided it was a death trap, and we weren't going to send them in there."

Crewmen also said weather conditions were becoming increasingly dangerous.

The support ship Narragansett steamed back to this Atlantic Ocean port today, towing an underwater living chamber used as a home base for the search at the ocean bottom. Divers Chris DeLucchi, and Donald Rodocker, both of San Diego, and photographer Bob Hollis remain in the habitat, affectionately known as "mother," undergoing decompression.

Before the search was abandoned, divers recovered some valuables, but crewmen refuse to detail what they are. Any booty may be subject to a court fight, and one crewman said there was a concern of "piracy" attempts on the trawler's return to Fairhaven.

No newsmen have been allowed aboard the Narragansett, and all reports on the progress of the expedition have been made over ship-to-shore radio by members of the salvage team.

Most of the $1.1 milion in cash and nearly $1 million more in art objects, jewery and other valuables, however, are believed located in four safes in the purser's office.

"Everybody was basically disappointed when we decided not to open the safes," Keiley said. "But when they realized what we accomplished with the (new diving) system, they felt a lot better about things."

The expedition employed a special "saturation diving" system, which enabled the divers to stay at the ocean bottom for an extended time living in the habitat and leaving it daily to search the Doria.

Israel plans hijack trial for Libyan

Israel laid the legal groundwork today to try Mohamed A-Touni, a 37-year-old Libyan, on hijack charges for forcing a Lebanese airliner to land at the Lod International Airport outside Tel Aviv Thursday. The Arab world was expressing growing belief that the hijacking was realy done by the Israelis.

A-Touni, disheveled and unshaven, appeared in a magistrate's court in Jerusalem today at a preliminary hearing and was ordered returned to jail while formal charges against him are prepared. He told the court he "only meant good" and "didn't mean to commit a crime" when he forced the Middle East Airlines plane with 125 passengers aboard to land in Israel.

Lt. Gen. David Elazar, the Israel armed forces chief of staff, said Thursday night that "the hijacker will be put on trial in Israel. That's how airplane hijackers must be treated all over the world."

Doubts he'll find any more

Sheriff continues search for bodies

HOUSTON (UPI) — Galveston County Sheriff ordered a road grader to scrape some beaches along the Gulf Coast today but doubts the machine will find any buried bodies.

"I don't expect to find any, but I think it is my responsibility to check the area more thoroughly," Sheriff J. B. Kline said.

Six bodies were found last week on the beach of High Island. Seventeen bodies were found buried beneath a Houston boat shed and four others in the pine forests of East Texas.

The 27 young men were killed during the last three years. Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, and David Owen Brooks, 18, have been indicted for some of the murders. They said Dean Arnold Corll, 33, was responsible for killing the boys.

Sheriff Kline said Corll supposedly told Henley and Brooks he buried a body without ever telling his teen-age accomplices.

"I think these kids have come as clean as they could and pinpointed as many as they knew about," Kline said.

Police in Houston said they believed all the bodies have been located and they don't plan to join in today's search.

"This search is news to us," Houston detective Danny R. James said. "We aren't going."

Corll's tombstone was placed on his grave this week. Corll was shot and killed by Henley, a shooting which uncovered the story of the nation's worst mass murder of the 20th Century. The tombstone bore the name Dean Arnold Corll. The police had idenfied the bacheor electrician as Dean Allen Corll.

A spokesman for the Pasadena police department said today it was always thought Corll's middle name was Allen. But officials checked his driver's license and other records which indicated his middle name was indeed Arnold.

Scale for state tax rebate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — An average family of four earning $15,000 annually will receive a $60 state income tax rebate next April under the tax rollback bill approved by the legislature Thursday.

The same family would get a $1,408 if it earned an adjusted gross income of $100,000 a year. A family of four earning $7,500 would receive a $4 refund.

The bill uses as sliding scale to determine income tax rebates. The scale ranges from a 35 per cent reduction for married couples earning $8,000 to a 20 per cent cut for those with adjusted gross incomes over $25,000.

No income taxes would be collected from married couples earning less than $8,000 and single persons with incomes under $4,000.

The percentage reductions for single persons will be about half those for married couples, but because single persons now pay higher income taxes they actually will receive more dollars back in rebates.

Here is a scale of average income tax rebates:

Married couples with two children

$7,500 —$4 rebate
$10,000 —$22 rebate
$15,000 —$60 rebate
$20,000 —$11 rebate
$25,00 —$137 rebate
$50,000 —$583 rebate
$100,000 —$1,508 rebate

Single persons

$5,000 —$14 rebate
$7,500 —$39 rebate
$10,000 —$66 rebate
$15,000 —$131 rebate
$20,000 —$181 rebate
$25,000 —$286 rebate
$50,000 —$731 rebate
$100,000 —$1,624 rebate

Woman's honor group votes to admit men

CLAREMONT — The 28th Biennial Council of Pi Lambda Theata Thursday voted to recommend to its 102 chapters the admission of men.

Pi Lambda Theta is an international honor and professional association for women in education. The council met at the Claremont Colleges.

Council president Dr. Georgia S. Adams, professor of education at Cal State Los Angeles, presided at the session when action was taken to recommend that men be admitted to membership.

The implementation of that resolution will be the responsibility of Dr. Wilma C. Shafer, professor of education at the University of Evansville in Evansville, Ind., who was installed president at the closing council session, succeeding Dr. Adams.

The 18,000-member Pi Lambda Theta was founded in 1910 in an effort to recognize outstanding women in education to compliment similar recognition of men in Phi Delta Kappa.

There were seven charter Pi Lambda Theta chapters at University of Missouri, Syracuse University, University of Kansas, University of Pittsburgh, University of Minnesota, University of Washington and University of Pennsylvania.

60 per cent think Nixon holding back

NEW YORK (UPI) — Six out of 10 persons who watched President Nixon's Watergate speech and were questioned afterward in a poll commissioned by CBS News believed the President was holding back important details about the Watergate cover-up.

Twenty-two per cent felt he revealed all he knows, and 17 per cent were unsure.

As to whether Nixon should remain in office, 59 per cent felt he should, 15 per cent felt the President should resign, and 10 per cent believed he should be impeached. The other 16 per cent were undecided.

The Opinion Research Corporation, of Princeton, N. J., which conducted the poll, said it contacted 592 people, 60 per cent of whom heard the President's speech. CBS released the results of the poll Thursday night.

Flood deaths in Pakistan near 1,000

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — A foreign office spokesman said today that the death toll from the floods now inundating the Punjab state of Pakistan is "certainly in the hundreds" and may pass the 1,000 mark.

Floods following unusually heavy monsoon rains have hit India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, inflicting enormous casualties and crop losses in all three nations, and more rain is forecast. Tens of millions of persons have been affected.

The foreign office spokesman described the floods as the worst in Pakistan's history and said interim damage estimates were in excess of $300 milion and could rise to $500 million.

"The economic picture for the current year is totally ruined," he said.

"This year may well be a minus year in our economic plans. Our export performance is bound to suffer. Cash crops of rice, cotton and sugar cane are badly affected."

The spokesman said the country's total food requirements would increase substantially but said he could not give precise estimates of the needs until the extent of flood damage in Sind province had been estimated.

He said massive foreign assistance would be required to eliminate the effects of the floods. He said that even prior to the disaster Pakistan needed to import some 100,000 tons of wheat. A spokesman said earlier that 15 million persons in Pakistan alone were in desperate need of medical assistance to combat threatened epidemics.

U.S. spy plane used to monitor Cambodia Reds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pentagon sources report the United States is using a jet black, stiletto-shaped spy plane to monitor insurgent activities in Cambodia.

The SR71 aircraft, which can fly 2,000 miles-an-hour at 80,000 feet altitude, are based in Okinawa and are being used to photograph Cambodia in the aftermath of the end of the U.S. bombing campaign, the sources said Thursday.

The SR71 flies too high to be attacked by antiaircraft fire, officials said.

The Pentagon said there have been less than a dozen C130 cargo plane flights to Phnom Penh since the Tuesday midnight bombing halt. The United States has said it will not retaliate if any of its planes flying into Cambodia are fired upon or hit.

TV actor, intruder kill each other

NEW YORK (UPI) —A wellknown male model armed with a gun and a nighttime intruder wielding a butcher knife fought a bedroom duel to the death Thursday before the horrified eyes of the model's wife.

Bruce Pecheur, 31, who modeled in more than 100 commercials and advertisements, and his wife, Lucy, were awakened about 2 a.m. in tthe apartment near Greenwich Village by an intruder standing at the bottom of the bed.

Police said Pecheur was bound by the intruder but managed to free himself and grab a .38-caliber pistol from his private collection.

"Now I'm going to have to hurt you," the burglar said when he saw the gun.

The intruder swinging the butcher knife attacked, striking Pecheur in the leg, abdomen and chest, the last blow apparently piercing the heart. Pecheur at the same time fired three to four shots.

Both men collapsed simultaneously and were dead when police arrived.

Pecheur's agent, Joe Hunter of Ford Modeling Agency, said he had been modeling five to six years and had appeared in commercials and advertisements promoting everything from coffee to razor blades.

"He never had one of those commercials that put him in the limelight," Hunter said. "He was an all around guy who coud do almost anything."

Hunter said Pecheur had just finished doing a series of advertisements in Alaska in which he was to become the "rugged outdoor type image" for L&M cigarettes. Those ads have not yet been released.

A graduate of Harvard University and a former teacher, Pecheur came to New York to act and had appeared in several off-Broadway plays and the Andy Warhol movie "Trash. 1

Police said the intruder demanded money when the couple awoke. He tore up a bed sheet and tied Peche urs hands' and then led Mrs. Pecheur, who was not injured, into the living roomwhere she gave him about $40.

Pecheur managed to untie his hands and grab his pistol.

CHP officer cleared of manslaughter

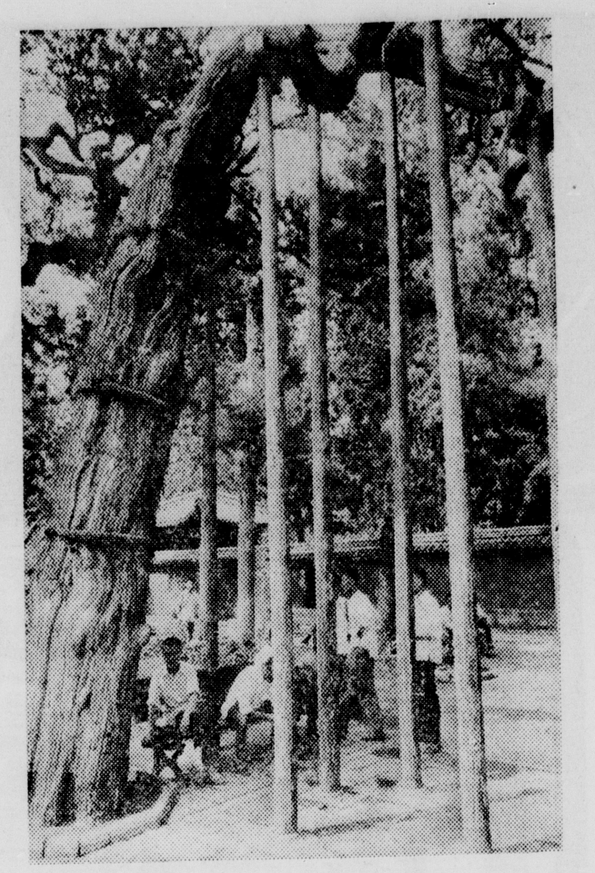

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The manslaughter charge against California Highway patroiman P. E. Nelander, accused of shooting a teen-ager, was dismissed by Superior Court Judge Ross G. Tharp Thursday.

"I think police officers take enough abuse without having to stand trial for performing their duties," the judge said in granting a motion for dismissal on grounds of insufficient evidence. "I think the officer deserves a commendation for doing his duty."

Nelander, 39, was indicted for manslaughter by the county grand jury June 26 in connection with the shooting of Roland R. Thomas, 16, son of Mrs. Norma Thomas.

The shooting followed a highspeed chase through National City and Bonita with Thomas driving an allegedly stolen car. Nelander started the pursuit in National City and followed Thomas nine miles to Sweetwater Road.

Thomas was shot after the car from an automobile dealership ran off the road. Nelander said in his report he thought Thomas, who made a "quick turning movement," was reaching for a weapon.

Assemblyman needles state board's acupuncture policy

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — San Francisco Assemblyman John Burton, saying the State Board of Medical Examiners "knows almost nothing" about acupuncture, scored a recent crackdown against unlicensed persons practicing the ancient Chinese medical art.

"This precipitous, uninformed action by the State Board of Medical Examiners impinges on the rights of thousands of my constituents to obtain the kind of medical care they are accustomed to receiving," he said.

"It is incredible to me that the state would act to drive out practitioners of a form of medicine at the same time it is attempting to encourage research on the very subject," the Democratic assemblyman said.

The board disclosed last month that it had brought criminal charges against two persons practicing acupuncture without a state medical license, had taken disciplinary action against an acupuncture center, and had 20 other cases under investigation.

At that time, a spokesman for the board said its policy had "two thrusts—to crack down on all unlicensed acupunture in California but at the same time keep an open mind toward the possible beneficial effects."

Butz lifts all controls on planting of wheat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz lifted all planting restrictions Thursday on wheat, which soared past $5 a bushel this week on Midwestern grain markets, in an effort to boost 1974 production enough to exceed heavy demands.

Pressure on the administration to impose export controls on wheat eased, however, with a sudden dropoff in grain futures market prices which began Wednesday The decline continued Thursday, with wheat for September delivery quoted as low as $4.70 a bushel in Chicago at the outset of heavy trading.

Butz and Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz have resisted pressure from bakers and millers for export controls to insure adequate domestic wheat supplies and keep prices down. Butz argues that costrols would damage U. S. efforts to defend the dollar abroad and to improve its balance of payments position.

The government predicts export of about two-thirds of this year's estimated U. S. wheat harvest of a little more than 1.7 billion bushels —which is about the usual percentage for sales abroad —but total demand already exceeds the harvest forecast.

Butz Thursday acted under terms of the new four-year farm support bill in setting the 1974 harvesting allotment at 55 million acres, up 1.3 million acres from the current estimate.

This allotment, on which wheat growers will get full government income protection under the new subsidy law, should produce about 1.78 billion bushels of wheat given good weather, and equal domestic and foreign demand in the 1974-75 marketing season starting next July 1.

But department officials said that under the new allotment, farms could easily increase their harvest to 60 million acres or more, producing a record 1.85 billion bushels.

This, they said, would be enough to meet all forecast demands and leave a surplus of 70 million bushels for reserve stocks expected to drop to a 20-year low next summer.

In another development, the Cost of Living Council said 68 of the nation's biggest corporations have served notice they intend to raise prices now that the two-month price freeze has expired. Council director John T. Dunlop said the number was "not out of line" with advance predictions.

He declined to speculate on the inflationary impact of the price boosts, which under Phase IV rules may go into effect after 30 days unless the council challenges them. Neither did he identify the corporations, although they were known to include U. S. steel and the big four auto manufacturers, General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American. Motors.

50,000 dead, thousands injured--threat from quakes

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Devastating earthquakes could kill more than 50,000 persons, injure tens of thousands of others and cause an estimated $21 billion damage in California in the next 30 years, a state gemlogical report said Wednesday.

The report, prepared over a three-year period by the state Division of Mines and Geology, pointed out that since 1812 recorded quakes have killed 1,020 persons and caused $1.1 billion in damage in California.

"Given a continuation of present conditions, it is estimated that losses due to earthquake shaking will total $21 billion in California between 1970 and the year 2000,'' the report added.

"Most of the damage and loss of life will occur in zones of known high seismic activity."

The report, titled the Urban Geology Master Plan for California, said "as many as 10,360 deaths and 40,360 hospitalized injuries have been projected to result from an 8.3 magnitude earthquake on the San Andreas fault near San Francisco."

An additional 30,000 deaths could result from earthquake induced dam failures in the San Francisco Bay area, it added.

"A hypothetical, but expectable, large earthquake in the Los Angeles area has been projected to result in 10,000 deaths," it continued. ,

But the report also said quake damage and loss of life could be dramatically reduced.

"If present day techniques for reducing losses from earthquake shaking were applied to the fullest degree, life loss could be reduced by at least 90 per cent, and the total dollar value of losses could be reduced by as much as 50 per cent," the report said.

The cost of loss reduction, the report said, would be more than $2 billion.

"Priority for geologic and seismologic efforts should be given to areas which are undergoing redevelopment or rapid urbanization or which are anticipated to become urbanized between the present and the year 2000," the report added.

The report also said that in addition to earthquakes, the state faced nine other major geological hazards, including loss of mineral resources, flooding and landslides, which could cause $55 billion damage from 1970 to 2000.

According to Thomas E. Gay Jr., senior state geologist and one of three authors of the report, the study was intended to help state and local agencies plan for safe and orderly growth in relation to geological hazards.

The study also made broad recommendations which could possibly reduce the total $55 billion damage figure by 69 per cent, but at a cost to the state of $6 billion.

The recommendations include better earthquake prediction, vigorous enforcement of improved building codes, land use zoning and the addition of geologists to the staffs of state and local agencies.

Gay said that although the report dramatized loss figures, it was not intended to be a "scare report."

But he added, "It's an expression of the seriousness of the problem. There are things that should be done and we should get to them."

He said state and local agencies should plan ahead and "not wait to be reminded by earthquakes or flooding disasters."

Other priority efforts for a reduction in quake loss, the report said, included "strengthening, demolishing, or reducing to a lesser use" old buildings.

The other hazards listed by the report included:

—''Loss of mineral resources due to urbanization between 1970 and the year 2000 is estimated to total $17 billion if current practices are continued." It recommended local governments "protect the critical mining resources" with special zoning to allow access and buffer areas. The resources under greatest urbanization pressure are construction materials, the report said.

—Losses from landsliding will total nearly $10 billion. The report recommended cities and counties chart their growth and identify possible landslide prone areas to be avoided.

—Losses from flooding will total $6.5 billion. The report recommended that flood control projects "such as those constructed by the Army Corps of Engineers" be encouraged and flood plain zoning ordinances and building codes should be enacted.

The three year study was financed by a federal Housing and Urban development grant of $100,000 and an identical figure provided by the state.

Church offers reduced price meats to flock

DETROIT (UPI) — Hundreds of parishoners stood in line at a Detroit church recently to get meat at a reduced price.

Tons of meat, including some choice New York strip and Delmonico steaks, and fish were for sale at special prices at the Oak Grove African Methodist Episcopal Church as a service of the church's buying club.

"When Jesus saw someone suffering, he didn't preach a sermon," said Rev. David E. Mitcham, organizer of the buying club. "He healed the person."

The club has an agreement with merchants to supply them with customers in exchange for cut rates on goods and services.

A 10-pound sack of hamburger was reduced from $14 to $12, a box of sausage that usually sells for $8 to $9 in markets went for $6.50 and fish, which regularly sells for up to $1.19 a pound, was offered at 59 cents a pound.

"This is my kind of religion," one shopper said while fondling 10-pound packs of hamburger. "I wish more churches would get involved with our everyday concerns."

Belfast housewife's 'code message' really note for the baker

By DONALD O'HIGGINS

BELFAST (UPI) — The British Army corporal crouched to examine the cryptic message pinned to the gatepost of the small terraced house.

"Two sliced — one veda," it read.

His patrol had reported similar messages over a period of weeks at the same house in the Roman Catholic Andersontown area, a known stronghold of the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Last weekend the corporal decided to take action. First he deployed his men around the house, cutting off all avenues of escape. Then he contacted headquarters.

"Veda," repeated the officer at headquarters, thoughtfully, "Never heard of it."

"Obviously some sort of a code, sir," the corporal said.

"You may be on to something," he was told. "Move in—but use extreme caution. It's a dicey neighborhood."

It was in the Andersontown area that the provisional IRA first used its Soviet-made rockets.

The corporal looked around to see that his men were in their places. He approached the house. When Mrs. Susan Welles opened the door, the color drained from her face. She looked at the corporal, then at the soldiers in her tiny garden.

"What do you want?" she asked nervously.

"I want to ask you a few questions," said the corporal. "We know about the message. Now we want you to tell us who they are for and why you are leaving them."

Mrs. Welles stared blankly at him. "What messages?" she asked.

"Aw, come off it," said the corporal, "We're on to you."

"I don't know what you're talking about," Mrs. Welles said.

"This is what I'm talking about," said the corporal, waving the message in front of her face. "Now tell me all about it—and you can begin by telling what 'veda' stands for."

Understanding flooded Mrs. Welles' face.

"Lord love ye," she beamed, "Why didn't you ask me straight away and I would have told you that a veda is a wee loaf. I left a message for the baker to leave me one and two sliced pans."

The corporal stared at her for a moment in silence. Then he signaled his men to pull out.

"Ye mean all the fuss was about a bloody bun," asked the voice from headquarters.

"Well, yes, sir," said the corporal.

There was a pause, then a chuckle, and the voice said "Carry on corporal—no more loafing about."

The corporal winced.

Suit cites sauna burn

Transformed into sex-hungry woman

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — A devout Catholic mother of eight turned into a sex-hungry woman resorting to barroom pickups because she was burned in a sauna bath, according to a lawsuit filed here.

The suit said the woman developed two personalities—Maria and Betty—that war with each other for control of her body. She was identified as Maria Ebelia Parson, 46.

She is being treated by a psychiatrist, who said she had made overtures to him too, the suit said. A jury trial was scheduled to begin Oct. 29.

The suit was filed Monday in Superior Court by Marvin Lewis, the San Francisco lawyer who won $50,000 for typist Gloria Sykes, 25, in a case that received much attention at the time. Miss Sykes maintained that injuries she suffered in a cable car accident turned her into a nymphomaniac, seeking sex with numbers of men.

"That was nothing compared to this," Lewis said.

"Mrs. Parson has been sexually involved with at least two dozen other men. On one occasion her husband had to follow her to Mexico to get her away from someone she met in a bar," Lewis said.

The suit claimed $1 million damage from the Holiday Health Spas of Orange, where Mrs. Parson was allegedly burned in a sauna bath three years ago.

Dr. Deane W. Denton, a psychiatrist, stated that before the incident, Mrs. Parson was "shy and devoutly Catholic."

Since the burning, the doctor said, "she has become, psychologically speaking, two women, Maria and Betty."

Maria, he said, is "the sexually hungry production of Mrs. Parson's mind," while Betty is "the guilt-ridden projection who bitterly regrets her actions."

He said she had developed "sex feelings for strangers, and those feelings often took control" when she met men in bars.

Although the burning increased Mrs. Parson's sexual desires for other men, the suit alleged, it cooled her feelings toward her husband. Whereas she formerly had an "excellent" sex life with the father of her eight children, the psychiatrist said, their sex life is now "nonexistent" and despite her liaisons with other men, she said sex with her husband had "become a chore."

FELIX BENDLER

Ex-convict faces losing 'land I love'

By MICHAEL V. USCHAN

BLACK RIVER FALLS, Wis. (UPI) — To Felix Bendler, America is a "land of opportunity, a place where I could make a future for myself." But he may not get the chance because of a conviction for selling marijuana six years ago.

Bendler, who has lived in Wisconsin for 21 of his 24 years, is not an American citizen. His parents came to this country from Germany after World War II as displaced persons and since only his father was naturalized before he was 18, Bendler didn't get automatic citizenship.

Because of that, his conviction in 1967 for selling marijuana while a senior at Washington High School in Milwaukee could mean his deportation to Germany—a land he lived in only as a baby.

"He is not a citizen of any country. He was born in a displaced persons camp, so he is literally a man without a country," David Hildebrant, a Milwaukee lawyer defending Bendler, said.

Bendler, who now works as a farm hand near Black River Falls, agrees. He doesn't speak very much German and says, "all my ties are in this country, my family, my wife's family. This is the land I love. I believe this is my country."

But because Bendler, an alien, was convicted of a felony drug charge, the law says he has to go back to his "point of origin," which is Germany.

Bendler served 23 months in prison. When he was released, he got an unconditional pardon from the governor which said specifically his conviction should not be grounds for deportation.

"But the immigration board," Hildebrandt said, "has to take a very tight view of the laws they have and they began deportation."

Bendler appealed to a regional office in Chicago and now the national appeal board in Washington is considering the case.

Hildebrandt said, "We expect a negative decision."

If that happens—Bender can either fight deportation on constitutional grounds or try to get Congress to act on his behalf.

"There is the possibility of a private bill in Congress which would be like a federal act of clemency," Hildebrandt said.

Limit on trees suggested

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Use restraint in the number of different tree species planted in a land-space development, advises Dr. William Welch, landscape horticulturist for Texas A&M University's agricultural extension service.

Too much variety results in confusion and lack of unity, Welch says.

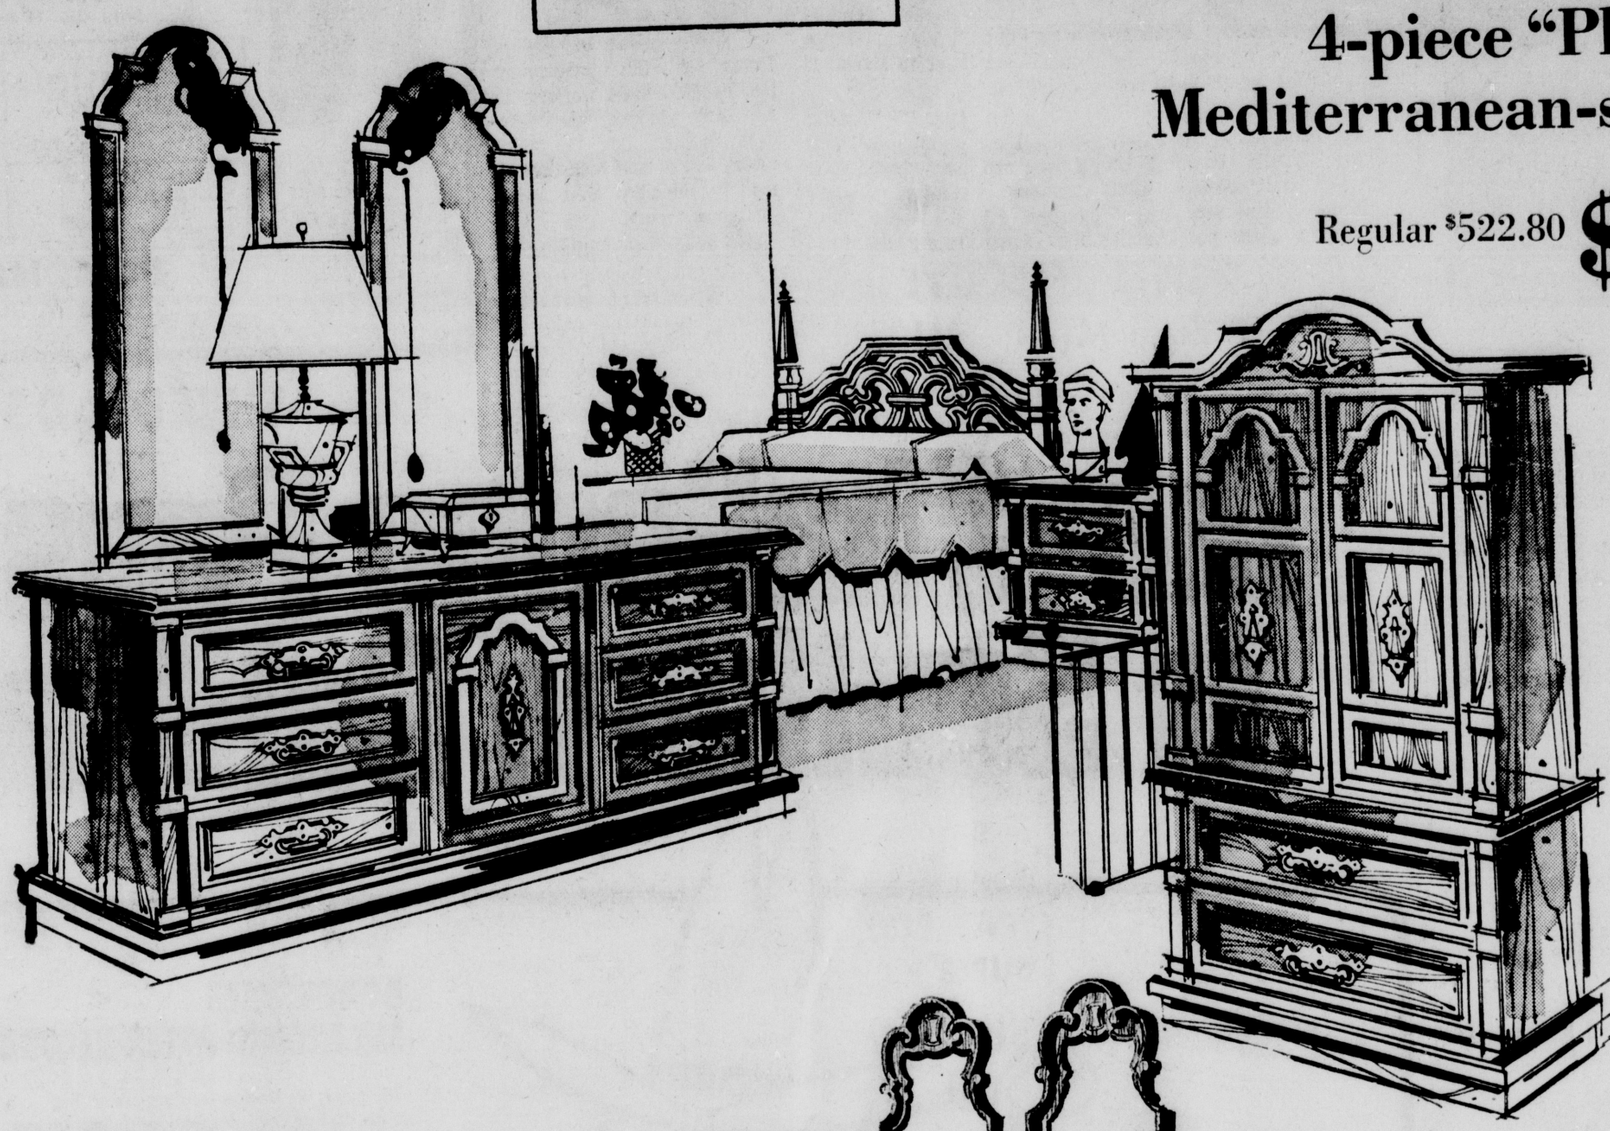

He suggests homeowners consider year-round interest in foliage, flower, fruit and bark as well as placement for proper shade and sun needs and a proper balance between evergreen and deciduous trees.

"Make trees a part of an overall landscape plan," Welch says.

Canada grows

VANCOUVER, B..C (UPI) — Canada estimates it gets 22,000 immigrants a year from the United States—4,000 of them from California.

A day off throws me off

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

Now that Congress has moved Labor Day to the first Monday in September, we can all look forward to another long weekend of playing bumper tag with our campers on the freeway.

(Labor Day, invented in 1882 by the Knights of Labor, has nothing to do with maternity, which was invented much earlier. It also has nothing to do with working, being a holiday.)

Long holiday weekends are fun—if you survive them. You have a delightful sense of euphoria when you go to bed Friday night, knowing you have ahead of you three whole days of loafing—unless you're married. Another charge you get is tumbling into the sack Sunday night with the happy thought that you can thumb your nose at the alarm clock in the morning.

Waking up on the long-holiday Monday, you have forgotten about it, especially if, as is probable, you have a hangover. And then the sudden realization of a few more hours of sleep leaves you surprised by joy. (Joy is the upstairs maid, or tweeny.)

By Tuesday morning the assorted kicks of the long weekend have eroded considerably, but there is a happy glow in recalling that there are only four more working days until Saturday.

A few hours at desk, drill or drafting board and it's practically the weekend again.

The few holidays that have withstood the change of our irrepressible Congress—July 4, Dec. 25—sometimes land in midweek and do funny things to the average working stiff. You live it up on Tuesday night, knowing Wednesday is a day off, but then your schedule is shot—all day Thursday you have a Monday feeling.

You do your Monday chores and make appointments for Tuesday. You forget your Thursday night bowling, and you wonder why the boys didn't show up for the Monday night poker game.

Your pal asks you next day, "Where were you last night?"

"Went to the movies, why? Bowling isn't till Thursday."

"Today is Friday, dum-dum."

"Oh?"

Wife says, "The man came about the water heater today."

"What?! I told that guy to be sure to be her Wednesday!"

"Today IS Wednesday dum-dum."

"Oh?"

It some times takes me a couple of weeks after a mid-week holiday to get back on schedule again. Pancakes for breakfast? But we only have pancakes on—oh, that's right, toda yis . . .

But after a Wednesday holiday, in spite of the fact that you've blown Thursday, it is fun to wake upon Friday morning and know it's Friday—almost as good as Saturday. T.G.I.F.

Viet senators ask U.S. bombing

SAIGON (UPI) — Four pro-government senators in a letter to U.S Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., asked the United States to reconsider the bombing halt in Cambodia, the semi-official Vietnam Press reported today.

The report said the letter, asking that the bombing be resumed and continue until December, was sent Aug. 6 but was not made public until today. America's 4½-year-old bombing campaign in Cambodia ended Wednesday under an agreement between President Nixon and Congress.

"The bombing halt voted by the U.S. Senate has weakened the defense of the nationaslist regime of Cambodia and has helped the Khmer Rouge (Cambodian rebels) and the Communists to take over that regime," Vietnam Press quoted the letter to Mansfield as saying.

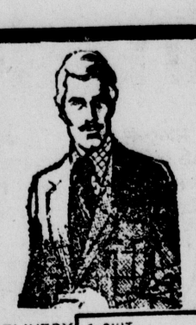

"The Aug. 15 deadline made the Communists more daring and strengthened their position in the negotiations for peace in Cambodia and at the same time destroyed eight years of (U.S) activity in South Vietnam and the sacrifice of 48,000 American lives.

"The bombing halt put South Vietnam and Thailand in a dangerous position."

The letter asked Congress to allow the bombing to continue until Dec. 21 "in order to bring peace to Indochina."

In another report, Vietnam Press said the government had ordered field workers in Gia Dinh province, which borders Saigon, not to carry more than $1 and only enough food for lunch when working in the rice paddies.

The report said the order was part of President Nguyen Van Thieu's campaign to impose an economic blockage on the Communists. It said those not following the directive would be punished, but did not specify how.

Formula is better for foal than pups

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: In past years I raised puppies on a formula of cow's milk with added sugar and lime water. I'm not sure but what I might have to raise a bigger baby starting very soon. It will be a foal. How will that kind of a formula work for this kind of a baby?—M.S.

Dear M.S.: Probably better than for puppies. At least the formula is closer to its mother's milk. The bitch's milk contains more protein and fat and less sugar than cow's milk so adding sugar to a puppy's formula is not the answer. On the other hand, mare's milk is lower in protein, lower in fat and higher in sugar than cow's milk so adding, a tablespoon per pint of milk, preferably skimmed, plus the lime water, three to five tablespoons, makes a fair foal formula. Skimming the milk brings the fat level down closer to the low level provided by mare's milk. At about three weeks of age the sugar could be removed from that formula. There are also synthetic milk replacers on the market for infants which, for many species, usually provide better results than modified cow's milk.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Blooper, our puppy, likes to chew on grass seeds, that big bunchy kind that start out green and then turn brown and are real pointy and prickly. I can't imageine why he likes that stuff, I think it would stick him in the tongue. But I guess it doesn't hurt him, does it?—L.B.

Dear L.B.: Any dry prickly grass awns, particularly the type called foxtails, are definitely not good dog food, or even a satisfactory snack. It cannot only puncture the tongue, especially on the underneath side, but work into the gum line in both upper and lower jaws or into the soft mouth parts anywhere to cause painful irritation and serious infection. In the throat foxtails may wedge behind, and work themselves into or beside the tonsils. They may penetrate or even perforate the throat, stomach or intestines. They can lodge anywhere in the body causing dangerous, even deadly complications. Blooper should not only NOT be allowed to snack on these foxtails or grass awns, you should not allow him to chew on anything or play ball anywhere where he might accidentally grab a grass awn at the same time he catches the ball or whatever.

Caspar's receptive, but he's not pushing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Caspar Weinberger, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said that he is not discouraging efforts to promote him as a candidate for governor of California, but is not fostering them either.

Weinberger told newsmen at a dinner that he was "honored and gratified" that several of Gov. Reagan's "kitchen cabinet" are trying to draft him to seek the Republican gubernatorial nomination for next year's election. He said he would not rule out accepting a draft, but asked whether that meant he would accept, he replied, "I have not felt any breezes."

Commuter train idea to Los Angeles picks up steam

POMONA — A proposal to run a daily commuter train between Colton and Los Angeles appears to be picking up steam.

San Bernardino County Supervisor Ruben S. Ayala said he has received numerous phone calls from city officials who endorse the proposal.

Ayala and Montclair Mayor Harold Hayes had proposed using existing railroad tracks in transporting commuters to and from Los Angeles.

Such a service would start in Colton and stop in Pomona and Monterey Park, before arriving at the Union Station in Los Angeles.

Ayala said he is sending letters to chambers of commerce and city councils in the areas to be served by such a service and asking for their support.

"We will use these resolutions of support when we meet with federal officials in Washington, D.C., to show such a proposal has wide support," he added.

"We would also like to have our delegation to include city officials. I hope each city will be able to send a representative to attend the different sessions and lend their support. This would show strength."

Ayala said the trip to Washington will be a key to the entire project. He has written to Rep. Jerry Pettis, R-33rd Dist., who is arranginging meetings with various federal agencies, including the Department of Transportation.

Passengers would be carried by the federally subsidized Amtrak which uses rails owned and operated by the railroad firms.

"It doesn't really matter who provides the tracks—Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, or Santa Fe. The main thing is to make use of the rails instead of the road," said Ayala.

The primary purpose is to serve those persons who commute daily to Los Angeles, he added. "we are not trying to take away any sales taxes from this area."

Such a train would attract residents from a 20 mile radius from each of the cities where it would stop, said Ayala.

For Pomona, this would include Chino, Ontario, Montclair, La Verne, San Dimas, Claremont and Diamond Bar.

"We proposed Pomona because it is more centrally located in the Pomona Valley, and there are existing facilities to serve the passengers."

A side effect to the Pomona location could be a stimulus to the Pomona Mall, he said. "This would serve to bring a large number of people to the downtown area. Many of the commuters may stop at the businesses on their way home to pick up groceries, their cleaning, or other items."

The Montclair Chamber of Commerce recently did a study showing the number of residents living within a five mile radius of the three railroad tracks. These include:

Southern Pacific, between Colton and Los Angeles, 1,060,449; Santa Fe, San Bernardino and Los Angeles, 971,381; and Union Pacific, San Bernardino and Los Angeles, 1,203,665.

These figures were obtained by using a map and obtaining the population of each community, said Tom Watson, chamber manager.

The commuter train proposal began with Hayes and Watson, who initially proposed a train service be established between Montclair and El Monte, where passengers could then transfer to the Southern California Rapid Transit District buses into Los Angeles.

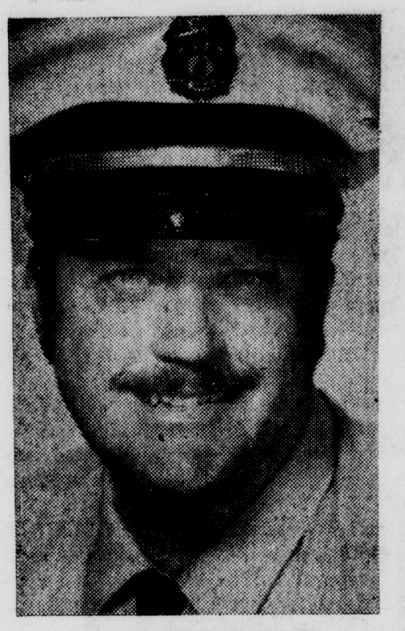

"When they contacted me for support, I suggested we proposed we expand it to extend from Colton to Los Angeles," said Ayala.

One ramification of the commuter service will be a distribution method once the passengers reach Los Angeles.

An Orange County firm has been employed to make a study and recommend how this can be done, said Ayala.

Ayala said he had contacted Peter Schabarum, chairman of the Los Angeles County Board of Superviors, to discuss the disbursement problem.

"Schabarum has given support to the commuter service and plans to go to Washington, D. C., if his schedule permits."

Weight, not content, is rule for ice cream pack

When I buy a half gallon of ice cream, I like to divide it into four one-pint containers and it always comes out short.

This time I had a brand of imitation ice milk. I found that the fourth container was only half full with the three previous ones not filled completely to the top.

This is definitely short of the amount stated on the package. I would like to know what can be done about it.—B.A., La Verne.

The cold facts about liquid and frozen milk products were explained to us by R. L. Van Buren, chief of the Bureau of Milk and Dairy Foods Control, California Department of Agriculture:

A half-gallon container should hold a half-gallon of liquid. When this container is used for a frozen milk product, the product should fill the container and, if filled with ice milk, ice cream, or the imitation of either, should weigh not less than 2.25 pounds.

In the manufacture of frozen milk products, air is incorporated into the product during the freezing process. If this were not the case, the frozen milk product would have the same body density of, for instance, an ice cube.

Air incorporated into a frozen milk product is referred to as overrun. Overrun ranges from 40 per cent (soft serve frosties) to 100 per cent (standard grocery store grade).

The amount of overrun is limited by the weight requirement on frozen milk products. Ice cream, ice milk, imitation ice cream and imitation ice milk must weigh not less than 4.5 pounds per gallon. When a frozen milk product is repackaged, there is always a loss in bulk due to the compression of the air cells that were incorporated during freezing. This is a principel reason for the cost difference between factory-filled ice cream and hand-dipped ice cream. A factory-filled quart will weigh around 19 ounces where a hand-dipped quart will run as high as 25 ounces.

Don't let this explanation weigh down your concern for consumer rights. Just get out your scales.

In April I went to a San Gabriel Valley store to buy a stereo unit. The owner told me he would order it. When I went in to pay, he told me he could not get the one I wanted and to pick out another.

I did pick out another unit and ordered four speakers and a cart. The original order was $158. My new order was $260 and I paid in cash.

The speakers arrived at the store about a week later. When I picked them up, the store owner insisted the cart on display would fit the unit. It did not. He said he would order another but after weeks of waiting and numerous phone calls, I can get no results. I wrote a letter stating I would like the cart or a refund. He didn't answer. We have spent over $700 in the store in the past year but can now only assume he finds this matter too trivial to bother with. I hope you can help.—J.A., Pomona

An angry young man who answered an Action Line phone call said he was willing to refund $10, the value of the cart, and had told you so. He said he had been unable to obtain the cart yet.

We gave you his message and you immediately called him but he was in conference. We then wrote reminding him of his offer of a $10 refund.

A few days later you called Action Line to say you had received the cart.

A request for another recipe also came in but Action Line will answer it personally with the help of the women's desk to avoid overburdening the postal service.

Marijuana sale charge is dismissed

POMONA — Charges of sales of marijuana have been dismissed against Donna Michell "Shelly" Alcorn, 20, of 515 Lincoln St. in the Pomona Superior Court.

It was erroneously reported Wednesday that Miss Alcorn was convicted of possession of barbiturates for sale.

Miss Alcorn was arrested Aug. 29, 1972, with another person at 140 Poplar St. in Pomona following a police investigation, Pomona police said. Police were aided in their investigation by a We T.I.P. (We Turn in Pushers, Inc.) informant.

Following a preliminary hearing in Pomona Municipal Court Miss Alcorn was bound over to Superior Court on the sales of marijuana charge. The charge was dismissed by the court.

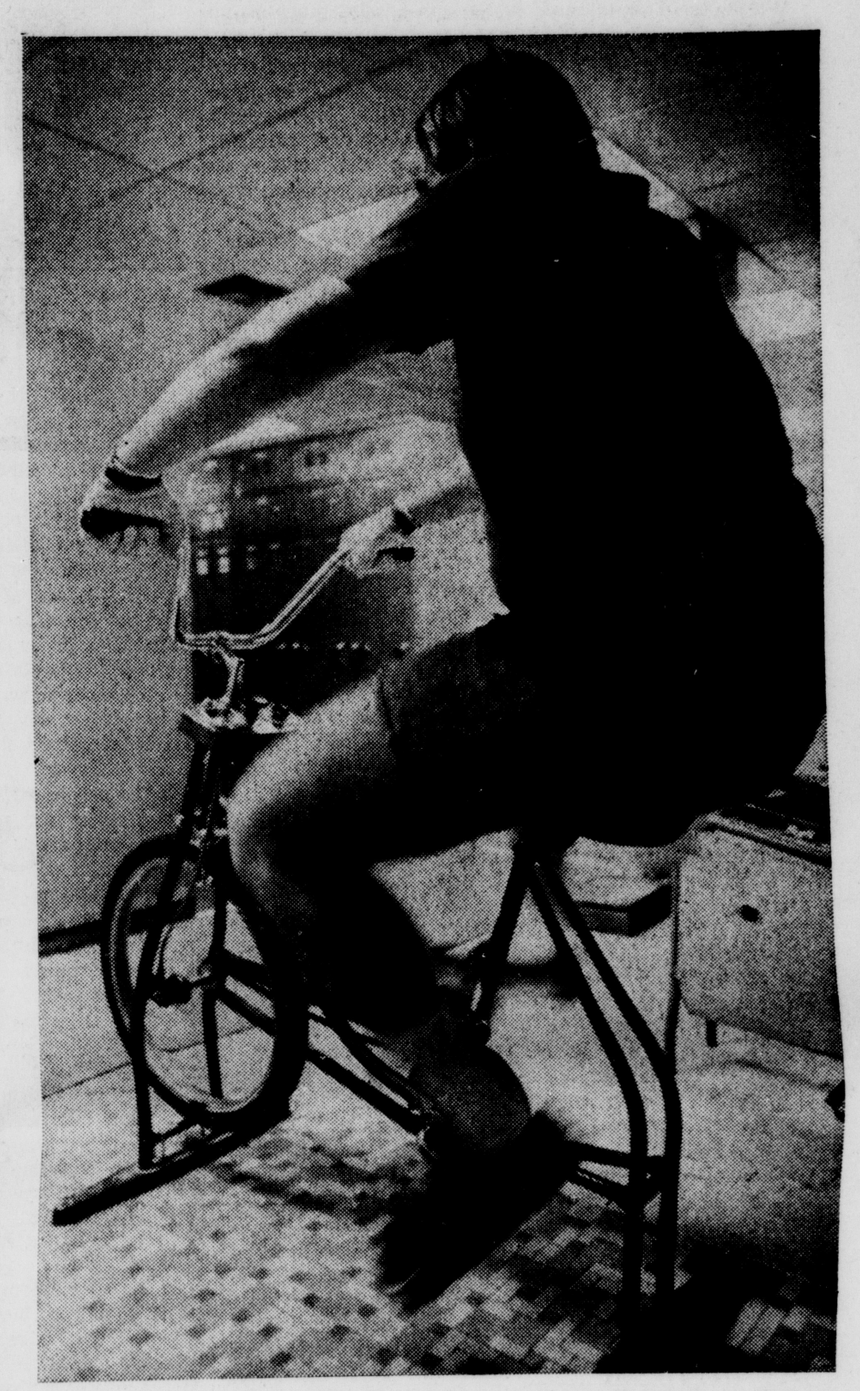

Bike-testing device given to Pomona

POMONA — A portable unit donated by Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2018 to test bicycle equipment and the skill of riders will become part of the city's bicycle safety program.

The unit will be used in the periodic bicycle rodeos sponsored jointly by the police, fire and recreation departments.

Children who successfully complete such a city-sponsored bicycle safety education program pay only 75 cents for bicycle registration and licensing instead of the usual fee of $1.50. The next rodeo is expected in February.

Fred Klein, commander of the VFW post, said the portable bicycle lane is used for testing bicycles completely, such as the brakes and wheel alignment, and the reaction of bicyclists. The unit is operated by electricity.

Trial opens for woman accused of attempt to have husband killed

POMONA — A 37-year-old Valinda mother of three children is on trial in Superior Court here for allegedly offering to pay $1,500 to a "hit man" for the murder of her husband last Jan. 24.

The woman, Mrs. Ann Marie Eaton of 16824 Glenhope Ave., later discovered that her "hit man" was in reality an undercover deputy sheriff from the Industry substation.

Her trial began Thursday before Judge Glenn M. Pfau. She is accused of soliciting the commission of murder.

Deputy Dist. Atty. John Anderson says Mrs. Eaton, a waitress and member of a women's pool team, tried to get rid of her husband because she was afraid of him and because she had hoped to collect insurance money on a homeowners' policy which amounts to more than $25,000.

Mrs. Eaton discussed her plans for the murder with another member of the pool team, who contacted the sheriff's office, authorities say. Deputies claim to have obtained a tape recording of Mrs. Eaton, making a deal for the murder with the undercover officer.

Opinion

Air traffic safety takes 'giant step'

For the past couple of decades, radar has been a primary tool for separating traffic in the air.

Because any sizable target in the sky reflects some of the energy beamed out into space during a radar transmitter's antenna sweep, this reflection can be shown on the radarscope as a blip of light. With a grid superimposed on the scope, there is no problem about locating the target horizontally from the radar station.

When few aircraft are in the area, traffic separation is simple. But when the traffic is heavy and consists of a mixture of aircraft with many different speeds and degrees of sophistication, safe separation can become a difficult chore—for the pilot as well as for the ground controller.

On July 2, 1975, however, "a new era in air traffic control will begin," the Federal Aviation Administration has announced.

On that date, more than 100 terminals and 20 FAA en route air traffic control centers will be equipped to automatically interrogate and track aircraft utilizing radar beacon transponders with altitude reporting capability.

"The effect of this new equipment on air traffic separation is expected to be nearly as dramatic as the inception of radar itself, over 30 years ago," says the agency's publication, Aviation News.

Any aircraft with automatic altitude reporting equipment will be tracked automatically on radar from the moment it enters a controller's sector. Its identification number will appear alongside the position symbol, together with altitude and air speed data. The controller will be able to tell at a glance the relative distances of one aircraft from another with regard to altitude as well as direction.

A new regulation which went into effect on July 20, 1973, will establish by stages over the next two years the need for transponders and automatic altitude reporting equipment in certain designated airspace. After July 1, 1975, only transponder-equipped aircraft will be permitted in all controlled airspace and terminal control areas of the 48 adjacent states and the District of Columbia.

At the present time, there are approximately 60,000 general aviation transponders in use which can be adapted to altitude reporting capability, at a cost ranging from $600 to $2,500, the agency estimates.

Of the 137,000 active civil aircraft in the United States today, some 41,000 are used in a manner that would necessitate installation of altitude reporting transponders after July 1, 1975. Another 25,000 units might be acquired by aircraft operators on a voluntary basis.

Operations at the vast majority of the nation's 11,000 airports serving general aviation will be little affected, says the FAA. But as the altitude report-the transponder comes into widespread use, the cost of the equipment is expected to fall to a figure that will make it a very desirable add-on to every safety-minded pilot.

"The general use of altitude reporting transponders in virtually all of the nation's busier airspace is expected to usher in an age of unparalleled flight safety, virtually eliminating the potental for a tragic general aviation-air carrier type of midair collision," says Aviation News.

Alaskan oil

The continuing delay in construction of the trans-Alaskan pipeline not only is costing the nation's economy more than we can afford, it also is a serious injustice to the people of that state.

That injustice is a factor that has not been widely discussed. It was pointed out recently by the state's Governor, William Egan, that while Alaska as a young state has made a good start toward meeting its critical needs in housing, employment, transportation, communications, easing rural poverty and such, it faces harmful delays in those undertakings and serious financial difficulties if it is not allowed to proceed soon with the development of its vast North Shore oil resources. Already it has lost an estimated $1.5 billion because of the delay.

Revenues from the production of Alaska's rich petroleum reserves was, the Governor said, "from the very first the financial keystone to Alaska's future as a state."

"Congress, in approving statehood," Egan declared, "was well aware of Alaska's potentially abundant petroleum reserves, and its favorable action was, in fact, premised on those reserves being developed and the resulting revenues paying the new state's way so that it could become a strong and self-sustaining partner of the union."

Which is a pretty strong added argument for expediting the construction of the pipeline.

Thoughts for today

For the day of the Lord is near upon all the nations. As you have done, it shall be done to you; your deeds shall return on your own head.—Obadiah 1:15.

Hunger in the land for old truths

WASHINGTON — The danger threatening our nation today is not one that can be repulsed by taking down our muskets from the mantle and joining the colors.

Our belief in ourselves is unraveling under the stresses of shattering scandals, breakdowns and breaches of faith in high places. A sense of things gone wrong pervades the land, of values lost, of anger against those who symbolize that loss.

Whatever it was we were trying to do together, whatever it was we once stood for, is dissolving into uncertainty and disillusion.

The only cures for lost identity are rediscovery and rededication. What is our national purpose? What is the source and measure of our patriotism?

No traditional bonds

Americans cannot find their answers in the traditional bonds that glue other nations together — the bonds of time and homogeny. "A thousand years scarce serve to form a state," said Winston Churchill. America has had but 200.

Other patriotisms are built upon a common race and ethnic origin, a common mother tongue, the same religion, a traditional music, culture and cuisine, even a shared hatred of neighboring nationalities, a pride of ancestry that can be traced back half a millenium.

Our people are made of of diverse nationalities that are traditional enemies, of a babble of mother tongues, a score of religions that have warred against one another.

Most of us can't trace our ancestors back further than some foreign wharf or railway depot and few would want to, for we are a nation descended from outcasts, escapees and bondsmen — the impoverished, starving and persecuted of the world. Even within our borders, we are a nation of wanderers, ever on the move from state to state.

Lincoln's answer

What could possibly unite and give purpose to such a kaleidoscopic populace? Abraham Lincoln had an answer: common belief in the ideas on which the nation was founded.

Every person should be equal before the law, in the voting booth and in his treatment by society.

Every person has freedoms and rights no one can justly take away — to pursue the path his abilities take him, to acquire knowledge without hindrance, to come and go as he pleases, to enjoy the fruits of his own labor, to be judged and rewarded on his merits, to speak his mind without fear, to worship in his own way, to be secure in his home, to be considered innocent of crime until fairly proved guilty.

Our national purpose was to show that people could live and flourish in freedom, and thus to furnish an example for oppressed peoples everywhere to emulate.

Now the beliefs that bind us are eroding. For many, personal freedom has been degraded into a license to seek cheap thrills and an excuse to escape from duty.

Bloated up

Government has been transformed into an instrument, not for safeguarding but for obtaining special favors at general expense. The federal establishment has been bloated up beyond recognition. It claims "inherent powers," wages secret wars, proclaims the right to lie to us, break into our homes, open our mail and tap our telephones.

There are many signs today of a hunger in the land for old truths. The time is at hand to turn this inchoate yearning into a movement of national regeneration.

In 1976, we shall celebrate our national bicentennial. Two years ago, the federal establishment took charge of making the arrangements for this momentous event. As usual, Washington operators turned it into a boondoggle.

What not take it back from the government?

Suggestions occur by the dozens. Families might begin again to tell their children of the codes of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin.

Television networks might give us more programs like "The Waltons."

Platform search

Political clubs might undertake a search, if they dare, to see if any resemblance can be found between their party platforms and the precepts of Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln.

Taxpayers' groups could wrap in the flag the forgotten virtue of frugality.

Corporations and cooperatives could conduct seminars to measure how far they have sold out the rights of free enterprise for the government subsidy.

Unions could sponsor efforts to regain the lost American supremacy in workmanship and productivity.

Bar associations might stiffen ethical standards.

Journalists might resolve to do something about the chief censors of the truth — their lassitude and their editors.

My friend Hank Meyer, the sage of Miami Beach, has proposed a theme: "I Love America." There are 200 million ways to say "I Love America" and an awesome need that each of us say it in his own words. If the words are to be true, they must come, not from the ad agencies, not from government promoters, but from the hearts of the people.

PAUL HARVEY

No certain criteria for death

Because our smartest doctors don't know when to say when, a lot of dead people are coming back to life.

Russell Lee, 25, Wilmington, Calif. bumped his head on an overhead beam while riding a horse and was "killed." DOA at the hospital. No respiration, no pulse, clinically dead.

Half an hour after the coroner confirmed death, Russell Lee was alive again.

Mario Calderini, 79, collapsed in his bathtub; the family doctor wrote "cerebral embolism" on the death certificate.

A mortician, putting the body in a coffin, noticed the blood vessel pulsing in Calderini's neck. He's "back."

Mary Carothers, 30, Redwood City, Calif., former beauty queen, was pronounced dead by two doctors after an auto accident in 1967. She's alive today.

There is yet no certain criteria for determining when the dead are dead.

Different states have different legal definitions.

Heartbeat and breathing used to be acceptable criteria, but both of those now can be perpetuated by machines.

Cessation of brain waves would satisfy some as a certain sign of death, yet brain waves may be undetectable in someone who is still breathing.

Surely "death" does not defy a legal definition, but until one is established, doctors may be tried for "murder" for pulling the plug on a respirator or for removing organs for transplant "prematurely"; or doctors may be dissuaded from useful transplants due to fear of litigation. And patients may be buried alive.

Dr. David Hausman of Southern Methodist is both a molecular biologist and a professor of philosophy. He is winning a considerable following in the medical profession for his belief that a person is dead "when unconsciousness is irreversible."

He says if a person appears to be irreversibly unconscious, then shutting off whatever machines are keeping his heart and lungs going will determine whether he is, in fact, dead.

Dr. Hausman proposes a board of experts to determine when to say when; others insist the decision must be left to one physician, and the law is purposely left as is — ambiguous.

The next comment involves a layman's reaction with neither medical nor legal implications.

Recently, beside a deathbed, I reflected on and found comfort in something I think somebody else said once:

If all the fetuses in all the wombs of all the women in the world could somehow communicate, at the birth of one all the others would surely say, "Poor old Joe has passed away."

LETTERS FROM P-B READERS

A closer look at life

Regarding your story Aug. 7 entitled "16 Years in Prison, He Finds a Kind of Lofty Freedom," I would like to personally express my gratitude for allowing so many people to learn about Junior. He is certainly a great bird in more ways than one.

Furthermore, the story will prove to be of tremendous value to me relative to the parole authorities. . .providing there is any truth in the statement "that a man who can find the time to feed a small bird every 15 minutes 12 hours each day for several weeks cannot be all bad."

Particularly in light of the fact that my anticipated reward for raising him was to watch him grow up and take flight over the fence. Why not? I could not get over the fence myself. To create the possibility of someone else to, even though a small innocent bird, provided me with a tremendous goal to aim for.

In view that your article mentions that I have served 16 years (in prison) and does not state my offense, I feel impelled to do so now. I have served the past 13 years for the offense of threatening a correctional officer. . . or uttering toward his direction, a verbal statement, namely "Get out of the way," while armed with a shoe repair knife. No bodily injury was involved or intended (this is in my transcript). I was convicted for this and my punishment was fixed at life imprisonment. My original offense was ADW. Assault with a deadly weapon. . . .this is what put the screws to me.

My efforts to secure a parole have been hampered by my attitude and resulting conduct while in prison. Needless to say, I became rebellious toward the correction officials as I felt that they had rendered me an injustice.

Not too long ago, following a continuous losing battle with the parole people, I decided to dust off my sense of values and take a closer look at my life. As a result, I have abandoned my old philosophies and acquired new ones. This is partly due to the fact that the world suffers enough already from people who have led lives like mine. Also, in today's society there is a great need for displaying a 'good will' attitude. Whatever is behind me, I have insight enough to know that I cannot change it. Sixteen years is a big chunk out of man's life. —Edward Louis Stephens, Chino.

Gossip for today

Today let's discuss one of the basic characteristics of women. A recent survey made by the National Institute of Mental Health now confirms something men throughout the world have been contending for thousands of years.—WOMEN COMPLAIN ALMOST TWICE AS MUCH AS MEN.—But there you have a fact which also dramatically points up how much smarter women are than men. As any woman could tell you if she wanted to divulge a carefully guarded secret, women are not really complaining. It's just that they are born with the knowledge that the squeaking wheel is the one that gets the grease.

And though at times their nagging may not always seem to be getting results, don't be too sure. Right now, even though their complaining and boycotting may not be doing much to lower food prices, it must be admitted that our women have at least accomplished some good. Because of those efforts they are now penny wise and pound losers.

INSIDE REPORT

Nixon crippled by own Congress

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON— The first potentially disastrous result abroad of President Nixon's Watergate catastrophe is now being felt with stinging impact in the collapse of his Cambodian policy and, more important, in the sudden awareness by Peking that the American connection is shot through with dangerous unpredictables.

The reaction in Peking to Mr. Nixon's worst time of troubles is still to a large extent ambiguous, shrouded in the minds of China's cold-eyed policymakers. These men regard the new American connection as having only one justification: as a counterweight to the power and hostility of the Soviet Union.

But not all the signs are completely ambiguous. Thus, the delay in Sen. Mike Mansfield's much-heralded second trip to Peking was specifically due to a polite but no-nonsense warning from Communist authorities there that this was not a propitious time.

The reason for that, it now appears certain, is that the special usefulness of Mansfield, as perceived in Peking, was his own special relationship with Prince Sihanouk, the ousted Cambodian monarch and Mansfield's old friend.

At the time Mansfield, the Senate majority leader, was originally asked to make his second visit to Peking. Communist China was looking to the Sihanouk option as the most promising of all the limited possibilities for settling the Cambodian civil war on terms not totally unacceptable to Peking.

Encuring political influence

The restoration of the mystic, playboy prince, the most politics, was designed to give Peking an enduring political influence in Phnom Penh. With Sihanouk restored, and backed by both Peking and Washington, the threatening growth of power throughout the Indochina peninsula by North Vietnam would beat least temporarily stopped.

Moreover, precisely some such political deal with Sihanouk was what Mr. Nixon has been plotting for months. Indeed, there is solid reason to believe that if Congress, in its unprecedented action of June 30, had not forced a bombing ban on the President, the U.S. and China could have contrived just such an end to the Cambodian sector of the Indochina war by mid-September.

It was to prepare the way for such a settlement that Mansfield was needed in Peking. Likewise, it was to bargain for just such a settlement that Mr. Nixon had ordered his ace foreign policy expert, Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, to go to Peking early this month. That journey, along with Mansfield's, will now not take place this month.

Imagine, then, how the cold-eyed rulers of Communist China must be reacting to the sudden discovery that President Nixon's freedom of action to negotiate has been undermined—in this case, by the bombing ban. Continuation of the bombing was judged no less in Peking than in Washington as an essential part of the complicated formula to slow the pro-Hanoi, "Khmer Rouge" Communist revolutionary movement in Cambodia, paving the way for Prince Sihanouk.

Reacting to weakness

Suddenly, Peking's clandestine ally in this complex political maneuver, Richard M. Nixon, is crippled not by foreign influence but by his own Congress reaching to growing presidential weakness induced by Watergate.

In Peking, the political ravages of Watergate are probably perceived with the same disbelief that guided U.S. policymakers during the ravages of the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution in China in the late 1960s.

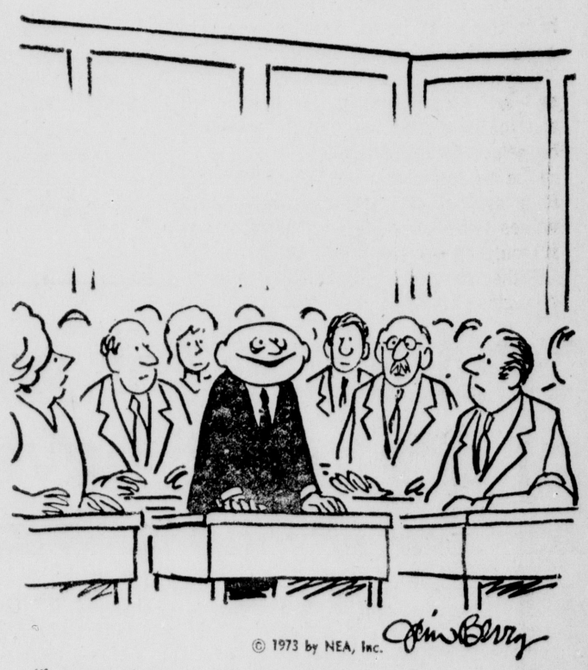

"Would Washington have made its political connection with Peking at the height of the cultural revolution?" one top Nixon lieutenant asks rhetorically, "when no one could even predict that the rulers of China would remain rulers for even another month?"

Or, as another White House aide put it sarcastically, Peking must wonder how the party that was repudiated in a historical landslide last November now finds its policies accepted in Congress, while the big winner, President Nixon, becomes the big loser.

Nothing has happened yet to destroy the short-term durability of the Washington-Peking axis. Its foundation—Peking's fear of Moscow—has not changed an iota.

But hideous dangers lie behind the ambiguities of subtle change in the way Peking—and all other nations—must now be studying the trust and durability of the U.S. as an ally. These are dangers blithely ignored by the faithless who gave the nation Watergate.

Changes urged in Montoya proposal

Stronger school-airport control bill sought

By JOE FARLEY
PB Staff Writer

Assemblyman Joseph Montoya is taking another look at legislation that would require the City of Industry to pay for relocating a school from near the airport it proposes to build.

The legislation, that was to be introduced into the state legislature last week, will now wait for reports from the state Board of Education and an anti-airport group.

Montoya plans to introduce the bill before the legislature recesses on Sept. 15, however.

As the bill currently reads, it would require airport developers to pay relocation costs for any school facilities within one-fourth mile of new airport runways.

Citizens Against the Airport, Rowland school board president Phil Anderson and Dr. Charles Ambellen, director of school planning on the state Board of Education, want "runway" changed to "airport boundary" in the bill.

"I asked Ambellen if the Department of Education had an interest in the bill or if he only had a personal interest. He said it was in his authority to take it up with the state Department of Education," Jerry Asher, Montoya's administrative assistant, said.

Christine Gilbert, chairwoman of the anti-airport group, requested that Montoya draft a bill prohibiting construction of an airport within two miles of an existing school, upon the suggestion of Ambellen.

"Quite honestly what they want to do is stop the City of Industry airport and that's not within the assemblyman's authority," Asher said.

"If they put the bill through, Industry can still build near the school. It will inconvenience Industry a little and supposedly pacify us. We don't want a bill that will only help us, but something to protect communities that might be victimized by the whims of big money," Mrs. Gilbert said.

Anderson said in a statement released to the press Thursday that Montoya's bill is "totally unacceptable." "It falls about one and a half miles short of the voters' wishes. We want the two-mile limitation and are not about to be misdirected. Concerned individuals should correspond with their assemblyman and express disapproval with the bill to be introduced," he said.

The bill should prohibit construction of an airport within at least two miles of existing schools, he said. "That distance is not only favored by the voters as a legal way to stop the City of Industry but also makes common sense," he said.

Mrs. Gilbert said she has drafted what she terms an "alternative" to Montoya's "weak bill." Her version would require airport developers to relocate school sites, administrative offices and existing schools within two miles of airport boundaries.

Long-range plans call for conversion of Walnut Elementary School, which lies within 1,000 feet of the proposed airport runway, to administrative offices. The Walnut school district also owns a proposed Glenwick Elementary School site near the proposed general aviation facility.

"Montoya has compromised the bill down to nothing. We want a bill that will make it impossible for an airport to go into that piece of land," Mrs. Gilbert said.

The bill makes no provisions for proposed school sites or for long-range school district plans for current school facilities. It would require Industry to pay for new school buildings, a new site and all relocation costs, which Supt. David Brown estimated to be about $1.5 million.

The airport legislation is one of eight new bills Montoya hopes to introduce during the current Assembly session. A bill clearing up several ambiguities in school redistricting law was introduced on Monday and is to go to committee study.

The redistricting bill was created in the wake of confusion over a proposal to redistrict north Diamond Bar schools from the Pomona to Walnut school district. It would require the Pomona board, or losing district, to decide the issue 30 days after the Walnut school board makes a final decision. There is currently no time requirement for the losing district in redistricting processes to make a decision on the proposal.

The proposed law would also permit a community election in Walnut to decide the redistricting proposal. Current law permits an election only in the district losing territory.

City abuses in airport plan denied

CITY OF INDUSTRY — City Manager Graham Ritchie says there is no wrong doing on the part of Industry or its urban renewal agency in ownership of a proposed airport site here.

He also discounts accusations of misconduct in dealings with local citizens seeking to block the proposed general aviation facility.

Ritchie's comments follow news that County Supervisor Baxter Ward is stepping into Supervisor Peter Schabarum's territory to investigate complaints from an anti-airport group. Mrs. Christine Gilbert, chairwoman of Citizens Against the Airport, has complained of lack of information on the facility and other problems in dealing with the city.

Regarding airport property ownership, Ritchie said all agency business is done by experts according to the law. It was learned last week that Raymond Reyes, a member of the Industry redevelopment agency, owns parcels of land near the airport site.

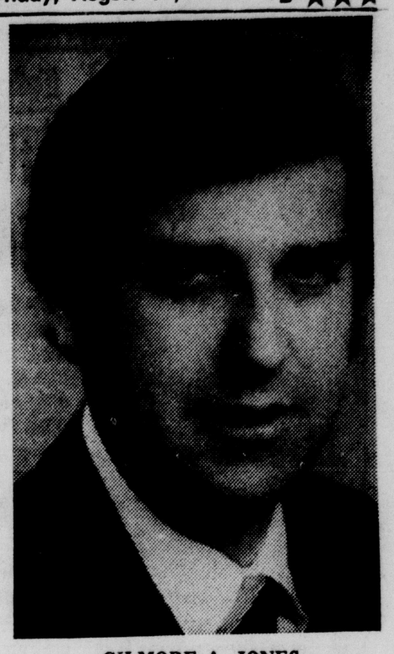

"All agency members have filed a list of their property holdings with the agency and no one is playing any games," he said. The largest property owner of the airport site is Kenneth T. Norris of Norris Industries. The Las Vegas Land and Water Co., a holding company of the Union Pacific Railroad, also owns large portions of the area, Ritchie said.

"Obviously nothing is going to go forth with the airport until the environmental impact report is ready and the county, Federal Aviation Administration, the state and the citizens are contacted," Ritchie said. "Everyone is going to be heard."

Ritchie said the city shares the concern of Walnut Valley residents over the proximity of Walnut Elementary School to the proposed airport site.

When contacted this week, Ritchie, who just returned from vacation, was not aware of a bill that's to be introduced into the state legislature requiring Industry to pick up the entire $1.5 million tab of relocating the school. (See story above.)

"We indicated in the beginning that we would be quite willing to work with the Walnut school district over relocation of that school," Ritchie said. "We are more than willing to work with those people with or without the bill."

R.H. parents stress basics in school poll

ROWLAND HEIGHTS — Results of a community goal-setting process for schools indicate parents still primarily are interested in having their children receive basic educations.

More than 500 parents participated in the goal-setting along with teachers and students, bringing the total number quizzed to more than 2,100.

Six goals which rated top priority were: Develop skills in reading, writing speaking and listening, gain a general education, develop pride in work and a feeling of self-worth, develop a desire for learning now and in the future, develop good character and self-respect and learn how to examine and use information.

Dr. Roy M. Fitch, professor of higher education at Cal State Northridge, is project consultant.

Walnut packing house -- brooding remnant of past

WALNUT — Lycoming Street is typical of the Southland's suburban sprawl—rows of medium-priced homes with two-car garages, plenty of kids and just a couple of blocks from the Pomona Freeway.

Only one thing catches the Lycoming Street motorist's eye as being out of the ordinary from most tract home developments.

Towering above the neighborhood and miniaturizing the homes is the former Walnut Fruit Growers Association's packing house, vintage 1906.

In the walnut-citrus growing heydey here the local packing house was the center of a bustling agriculture belt. Today the splintery wooden structure and a fading "Sunkist oranges" sign are the only reminders of the packing house's 67-year history.

The nostalgic say the packing house is a symbol of changing times and values while some local residents claim it's only an eyesore and a fire hazard.

Either way, the aging building reflects changing lifestyles and mores in the agricultural community turned suburbia. Walnut and citrus crops were traded for modern furnture at the house in 1964 when an El Monte furniture company moved in.

Homes and paved streets have replaced rolling hillsides of narrow dirt roads and orange, lemon and walnut groves. The small amount of fruit produced locally is now sent to Riverside for processing. Local residents no longer work and live in the area, most now drive into Los Angeles. Agriculture is no longer the chief source of Walnut Valley's income.

The closure of the packing house in 1964 was the final chapter to the departure of the citrus dynasty in the Pomona Valley. Active packing houses, which once dotted the tri-county area, are now down to a handful.

NEWS ITEM, SEPT. 15, 1928: Marking an increase of $300,000 over last year's returns, the Walnut Fruit Growers Association submitted at its annual meeting today figures showing total returns of $1,177,469 for both walnuts and oranges.

Commenting on the above Progress-Bulletin article, F.A. Dyer, former packing house manager, recalled a prosperous agricultural business, not marked by high land and production costs.

"The walnut crops were still in their prime then. We had several tons of walnuts and the citrus groves were still young, but both were producing very well," Dyer said.

At its height the packing house employed about 40 people, he said, but was always busy with either walnuts or oranges. The facility was created in 1906 by a group of local citrus growers, with the amount of land a man owned determining his contribution to the packing house costs.

NEWS ITEM, DEC. 7, 1954: Stockholders of the Walnut Fruit Growers Association received $467,981 in returns during the 1954 season, according to the report of F.A. Dyer, secretary and manager, at the organization's 49th annual meeting Tuesday.

"We used to pack the oranges there in the early spring and then the walnuts in the fall," citrus grower Frank McMillan said. "It was a very good packing house when Dyer was manager. The manager has a good deal to say as to where the fruit will be marketed and he did the most to save the grower," he said.

The last 10 years of the house's operations were devoted strictly to citrus crops, McMillan said, because the walnut groves fell victim to disease.

In its peak years in the early 1940s the Walnut packing house accounted for over 370,000 filled boxes of citrus packed annually and a sizeable walnut crop. In its final years the size of the crop steadily declined as urbanization advanced. Its 1964 season included only 120,000 boxes of fruit.

NEWS ITEM, DEC. 20, 1964: The Walnut Fruit Growers Association voted Oct. 15 to close down the big packing house on Lycoming Street east of Lemon Avenue after nearly 60 years of operation.

City of Industry plan on track again

School tax issue, renewal project unknotted by bill

Trailer legislation to Senate Bill 90 has come to the rescue of the City of Industry's urban redevolpment project.

Phase two of the massive three-phase project has been stalled since last year while city and school district officials tried to solve tax problems created by the project. The trailer legislation supposedly irons out the taxing problems.

The redevelopment plan freezes assessed valuations of property on the eastern side of the city, which lies within the Pomona, Rowland, Walnut and Mt. San Antonio College school districts. The trailer legislation permits school districts to recover frozen valuation losses by increasing tax rates throughout the districts.

"That means all taxpayers will be making up the revenue loss from the frozen assessed valuation in a small portion of their district, something taxpayers may not appreciate," Walnut Supt. of Business George Hartnett explained.

School and City of Industry officials were working out compromise cash settlements to offset the valuation of revenue loss when Senate Bill 90 was created.

Negotiations for the compromises, which would have paid local schools as much as $436,000 a year, stopped several months ago when the Senate bill was in the planning stages, said Graham Ritchie, Industry city manager and attorney. "That had been a major stumbling block to getting project two under way," he said.

The Hacienda-La Puente, Rowland and Mt. San Antonio College districts had already been paid a total of $145,000 for the 1972-73 fiscal year's losses from the freeze when the new legislation was adopted.

That money will not be returned, officials said, because it covers 1972-73 fiscal year losses while SB 90 only affects 1973-74 losses.

"The new method of recovery greatly reduces the problem. There will still be some loss, but in terms of what it would have been with the new legislation the loss is minor," said Stanley Oswalt, superintendent of Rowland schools.

Government regulations allow local municipalities to freeze their assessed valuation when improving "blighted" areas. School officials have charged that most of the 700-plus acres to be redeveloped were not inhabited and not blighted.

The agency's phase two project would freeze district income from city property at its present level and keep it there until the last redevelopment bonds are paid off in about 20 years.

Phase two would extend and widen Grand and Lemon avenues, linking the streets to the Pomona Freeway and includes plans for a controversial general aviation airport between Walnut and Lemon avenues.

Then he asked the all important question "How can I make my contract?" and decided that the best way to go about it was to leave trumps entirely alone until he could do something about his side suit.

East overruffed and returned a trump.

South won with his ace, led a fourth diamond and ruffed once more. East overruffed but that was the last trick for the defense. East was going to make two trumps no matter how South had played. South had forced him to make them by ruffing West's high diamonds.

West could have beaten the contract by shifting to a trump at trick two. Then, when East overruffed the diamond, East could have been able to get rid of dummy's last trump and West would have collected a diamond trick.

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — A father rushing to see his dying daughter said Thursday that he was put off a bus because he did not have the exact fare.

David Ridgeway complained to the city, which runs the Nottingham bus service, after the death of his daughter Caroline, 3.

"I jumped on the bus with only 10 pence," Ridgeway said. "The driver said that because I hadn't the exact fare, six pence, he couldn't accept the 10 pence. I told him my daughter had been burned, but he didn't seem interested."

Ridgeway did see his daughter before her death, because he ran into a nearby shop to get change. But he had to wait for another bus.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Through carelessness or incendiarism, man causes the largest portion of forest fires in the United States. During 1971, some 94,365 fires, or 90 per cent, reported as having burned on protected lands, were man-caused, The World Almanac notes. More than 574 million acres of forest land are protected under the Federal-State Cooperative Forest Fire Control Program.

New seat belt system hit by engineer

DETROIT (UPI) — A retired Ford engineer who helped develop a seat belt system that forces drivers and front seat passengers to buckle up before the car can start up Wednesday said the device is "potentially lethal."

Emile Grenier, 62, took early retirement from Ford to wage a one-man campaign against the use of the new interlock system. He has spent more than $1,000, he said, but so far admits little success.

A federal safety standard requiring the ignition interlock became effective Wednesday. All 1974-model cars will either have the new lap-shoulder belt with the ignition interlock or air bags, which will be optional on about 100,000 General Motors cars.

The driver and right-seat passenger must follow a specific sequence in getting in the car, sitting down, buckling up and then starting the car. If the order is not followed, or one passenger is not buckled up, the car can't be started.

Failure predicted

General Motors engineers have estimated that as many as 3 per cent—or 300,000 cars—will experience a mechanical failure in the first year.

"You'd have to be a fool to say that none of those 300,000 won't be emergency situations," Grenier said in an interview. "They (motorists) are going to die.

"My argument is that the interlock is potentially lethal and that a lot of people are going to die."

Grenier said the interlock might be dangerous in these situations:

—A woman being followed to her car by a man bent on rape might be unable to avoid her attacker if she could not start her car quickly.

—An injured child placed on the front seat for a trip to the hospital could mislead the system because his or her weight when lying down would be less than an adult's and distributed differently. This would prevent the car from starting because the device would interpret the unusual weight pattern as an attempt to get the car going without fastening the seat belt.

1,800 cars tested

Ford spokesmen said more than 1,800 cars have been tested with the new equipment and they could not agree with Grenier on his "imagined hazards."

"The important thing here is the 33,000 people killed in cars last year and the proportion of them who would be saved because of seat belts," said a Ford spokesman.

Grenier said he once panicked upon leaving a carwash and could not manage to connect the system so his auto would work.

"If I, who put this car together, got panicky, how can I expect the average person to cope with it under stress?" Grenier asked.

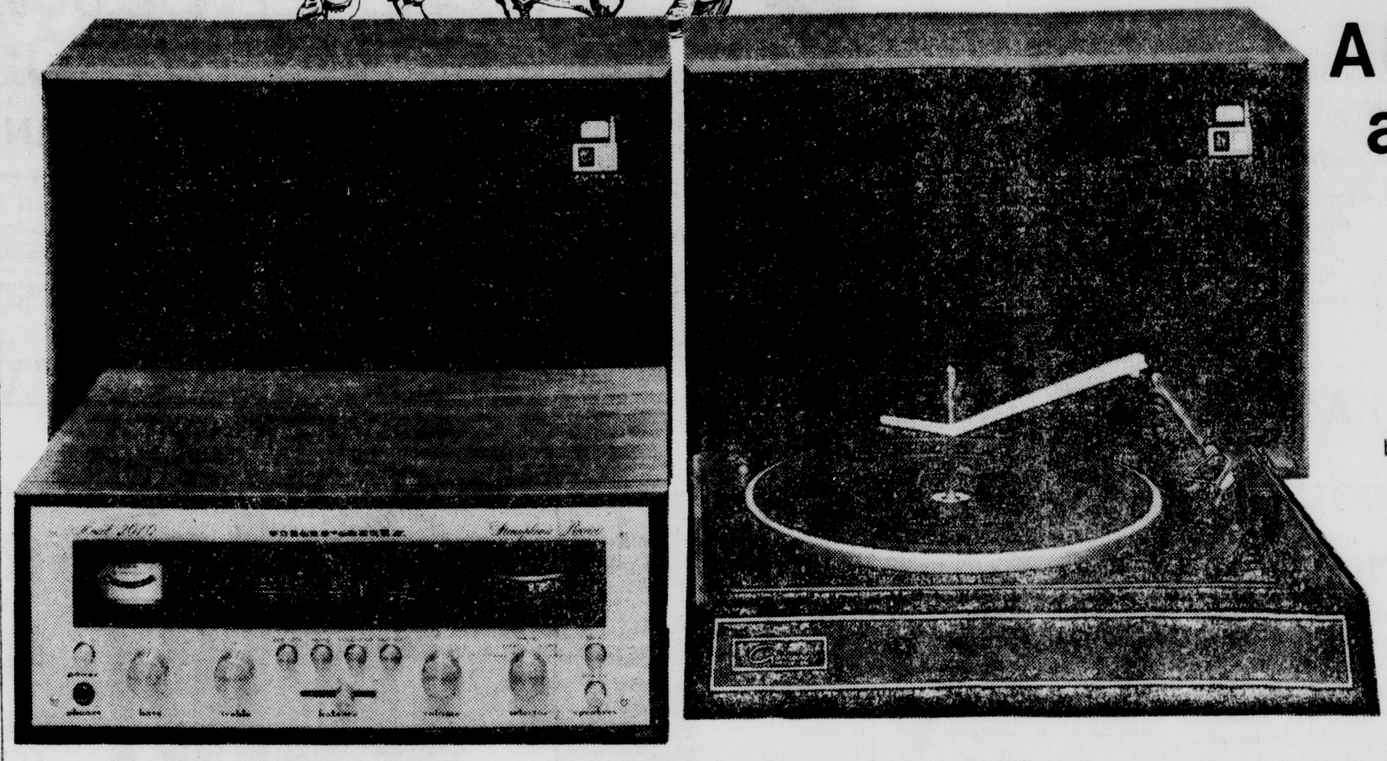

Canal is cheaper

More than 400,000 vessels have navigated the Panama Canal since 1914, paying an average toll, based on tonnage, of $6,600. Many times that amount can be saved in time and travel costs compared to a trip around South America.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Skin-deep beauty

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm a 20-year-old guy who's always been a sucker for a beautiful girl, and, I might add, I've usually ended up getting rooked. About six months ago, I did a buddy a favor and went out with his sister because she didn't have a date. She's not very much to look at but somehow we really dug each other. I kept thinking of her as a friend more than a date and I found that I was going to her whenever I really wanted to talk or whenever I felt uneasy with myself.

Last month she told me she was in love with me and it really threw me. I suddenly realized that because she wasn't beautiful I hadn't really thought of her as a female. I think I could love her if I could get over my hangup about how people look. Do you think there's something wrong with me for being so conscious about what people look like that I don't even see the real person underneath? Can I overcome this?—K.R.

Dear K.R.: No, I don't think there's something "wrong" with you. It is an unfortunate fact that many Americans are more concerned with the surface, with the way people look than they are with the real character or personality an individual might have. Beauty is only skin-deep, but judging from some studies, most peoople still don't know this, or else they refuse to believe the old adage.

Dr. Ellen Berscheid of the University of Minnesota and Dr. Elaine Walster of the University of Wisconsin, psychologists, tested 30 male and 30 female psychology students at the University of Minnesota to see just how strongly they would link beauty to a desirable personality and success. They discovered that to most, the pretty person was deemed most socially desirable, most likely to get the more prestigious jobs and to experience the happiest of marriages.

It has been shown that physical attractiveness may be the single most important factor in determining popularity among college-age adults.

Men who believe the beautiful woman will make the perfect wife may be in for a shock, however, as a number of studies reveal that unusually attractive women do not have a high rate of marital success. Dr. Milton Sapirstein believes that the beautiful woman is far less apt to achieve a good marriage than her plain sister. Outstanding beauty arouses irrational expectations in men which, Dr. Sapirstein says, collide head-on with the expectations the beauty herself has. The result of this collision is usually disaster. Both the man and the woman feel they've been cheated, just as you, apparently, feel you've been cheated in your past relationships with girls.

Some insecure men try to prop up their ego by using the beautiful woman as a kind of status symbol. This is truly unfair to the woman as she is being used in the same way a high-priced car might be used. Eventually, she becomes aware of this, resents the man and may begin to doubt her own worth as a human being apart from her beauty.

From your description it seems as if you have the beginning of a really good relationship with this girl you now consider only a friend. You have the basis for a much more solid, enduring relationship than you've had in the past, and if you give this girl half a chance, you may find her much more stimulting in every way than the raging beauties you've known in the past.

As a way of observing the 53rd anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment, which gave women the right to vote, the Pomona Valley Chapter of the National Organization for Women has planned a "Free People's Picnic" Aug. 26, at the Frank G. Bonelli County Park in San Dimas.

Commencing at noon in the group area of the park, the picnic is also meant to be an expression of support for the Equal Rights Amendment, now up for ratification by the individual state legislatures.

Although organized by the NOW chapter, the picnic is open to the public. Participants are asked to bring some extra food to share potluck style. Women's liberation items such as bumper stickers and posters will be available, as well as information concerning the chapter's fall activites. Reagan tries to guarantee jobs for all

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Reagan administration is considering a "guaranteed job" proposal that would eliminate welfare payments to ablebodied workers, the Department of Human Resources Development said today.

The goal is to completely do away with welfare for persons qualified to work.

Inherent in the present form of the proposal, as some critics pointed out, is the result that if parents refuse a job, there would be no welfare for their children. The offspring could then be taken away and put in foster homes under current failure-to-support laws.

But Deputy Human Resources Director Peter Rank cautioned that was not the aim of the proposal.

Rather, he said, "it is an attempt to find an enlightened solution to the problem of finding welfare recipients jobs."

"There is nothing in this that would change the laws regarding parents' responsibility to care for their children," he declared.

The fact that parents would be left with the choice of working or possibly losing their children is "why this is still a proposal," Rank said.

He repeatedly emphasized the idea of a guaranteed job was one of several prepared by his staff during the last year or so and was "a far cry from the decision level."

As explained by Rank, the plan would affect only families where a parent is qualified to work. Instead of direct welfare payments, employers would be given a like sum, add some of their own, and hire the recipient.

A department spokesman said all persons would be assured of receiving at least the minimum wage.

"The question is can we provide jobs for everyone?" Rank said. "If we can, we've really found something."

'In recession right now,' says legislator

TEXARKANA, Tex. ZUPI) — Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., said Thursday that "we are in a recession right now" and headed for a real depression unless something is done at once to head it off.

Patman, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, blamed high interest rates for what he foresees as a coming depression. The prime interest rate now is as high as 9.25 per cent.

"The big banks and Federal Reserve are making a depression right now. The prime interest rate is a big fraud and a fake anyway. it is not meaningful and nobody enforces it," he said.

"It means that big fellows like General Motors, General Electric and American Telephone & Telegraph can get their money at a fixed rate. It is a ceiling for them. But it is a floor for other persons, who have to pay interest rates of 15 per cent sometimes."

Patman, home while Congress is in recess for the summer, said his committee will start two weeks' hearings Sept. 11 in an effort to get the facts on rising interest rates.

Patman said he had found his constituents interested in the Watergate affair, but not as interested as in other matters.

"Like housing," Patman said. "They can't get it at reasonable cost. Interest is twice as much as the cost of a home. They are worried about price and wage controls.

"There is no way to do it except by controls. Part controls don't work. The surgeon who wields the knife should want the patient to live. But in this case I'm not sure the people who wield the knife want the patient to live.

"I'm not sure they are for price and wage controls. But we are in a dangerous situation with inflation. The best way to stop inflation is to control interest rates. They say raising interest rates will deter inflation. I say it is like pouring gasoline on a house on fire."

Pacific Group Theater presents drama for VCT

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

POMONA — Two highly competent actors undertook the formidable, nay, impossible task of putting drama and interest into Mel Dinelli's stultifying melodrama, "The Man," at Valley Community Theater Thursday night.

The Pacific Theater Group production goes at 8:30 tonight and Saturday and next weekend. Reservations can be made at 622-6954.

The burden of keeping the audience awake falls on Hilda Allen, the stereotype of the warm-hearted, lonely Brooklyn housewife, and Thom Roman, all bulging eyes, nervous twitches and exaggerated stammer. The fact they they fail is not due to their considerable talents but to the playwright, whose sledge-hammer subtlety and repetitiousness leave the audience benumbed.

Miss Allen is a superior actress, who exudes the warm, innocent befuddlement of the middle-aged widow in an easy and persuasive performance.

Young Roman, too, is made for better things. He has a vitality and imagination that demand more than this, an electricity that requires—and deserves—greater challenge and scope.

Richard Dow, former VCT actor and director, directed the PGT production with discipline and flair.

Pennypinching former seaman leaves fortune

BRIGHTON, England (UPI) — William Lyon, a pennypinching ex-seaman who even canceled his newspaper when it went up a half penny in price, left a fortune of $750,000, according to his will read recently.

Lyon, 87, died in the public ward of a Brighton hospital. Neighbors said he dressed like a tramp and lived for 30 years with his sister in a shabby house in Brighton.

"He and his sister were two very lonely people. As far as I know, neither of them ever married," said Mrs. Gadys Andrews, a neighbor. "He told us he dealt in stocks and shares but we had no inkling he had made so much money."

Lyon left his house and $1-250 each to Mrs. Andrews and her husband, Philip, but most of his estate went to Brighton hospital.

FRANKIE AVALON, former teen-age idol who has starred in more than 30 films, will perform at the Showcase Theater of Magic Mountain amusement park in Valencia at 8 and 10 p.m. Tuesday through Aug. 26.

Chinese Opera scheduled at Music Center

LOS ANGELES — The National Chinese Opera Theater of the Republic of China will oepn an eight-performance engagement at the Ahmanson Theater of the Los Angeles Music Center Sept. 18.

The Taiwan-based company of 80 singers, actors, acrobats, Kung-fu martial arts warriors and musicians will present one program on the evenings of Sept. 18, 20, 21, 22 and the matinee of Sept. 23, containing highlights from the following classic Peiping repertoire: "Han Tsin K'ou" (At the River Ford), "Hsiao Fang Niu" (The Cowherd and the Village Girl), "Mei Hou Wang" (The Monkey King), "Erh Chin Kung" (Two Loyal Officials), and "Liang Hung-yu" (The Lady Warrior).

Anothe program, on the evenings of Sept. 19 and 23, and the matinee of Sept. 22 will contain excerpts from "Chan Yen Liang" (Slaying of Yen Liang), "Tien Nu San Hua" (Heavenly Angels3, "Fan Li-hua" (The Court-martial), "Chin Tung Yu Nu" (The Paper Man), "Chin Shan Szu" (The White Serpent).

Musical to premiere on the Queen Mary

LONG BEACH — "The Incommunicado Mikado," combining Watergate satire with Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera, "The Mikado," will have its world premiere aboard the Queen Mary at 8:30 p.m. Sept. 7.

The show is an updated version of the Gilbert and Sullivan classic, with book and lyrics adapted by Rodert L. Oshins and Henry Reese. The authors say they have had a "liberal assist" from the Commitee to Re-elect the President and the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities.

The musical comedy, subtitled "Let the Punishment Fit the List," seeks to use the scalpel of satire on the current political situation. Gilbert and Sullivan's masterpiece did the same to the pomposity of Victorian politics when first produced in 1885.

Sir Arthur Sullivan's music has been adapted by Roger Chapman.

Performances will be given Monday through Thursday at 8:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the liner's Grand Salon. Special performances may be arranged for groups, including dinner and round-trip transportation to Long Beach on authentic, double-deck London busses.

Tickets for "The Incommunicado Mikado" are available through Ticketron, Liberty and Mutual agencies. Mail orders may be addressed to Blackfriars Productions, 6533 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood 90028.

Reviews of movies

By SARAH SMILEY

"The Friends of Eddie Coyle" is a flat, spare film that draws a more convincing portrait of the underworld than any movie in recent memory. It is a film totally devoid of the usual exploitive sex, chase and bloody combat scenes one expects from the traditional adventure genre, yet its serious, low-key approach to its subject makes it all the more truly chilling because it is all the more real. Rather than spoon feeding us a calculatedly sensational series of shocks and thrills, "Eddie Coyle" simply lets the mentality, the situations, the characters of the underworld speak for themselves. The result is a remarkable film, though not an "entertaining" one in the usual sense of that word. As Eddie Coyle, a recently busted, third rate, middle-aged hood who's feeling tired enough to trade some information about his associates to the police in hopes of avoiding a prison sentence, Robert Mitchum gives the finest performance of his career. At Cinema II, Montclair Plaza, with the beautifully acted, directed, and photographed "Scarecrow." Some double bill!

"White Lightning" is a Burt Reynolds action movie with a script as melodramatic, predictable, and cliche ridden as "Eddie Coyle's" is original. Happily, though, movies don't always live and die on their scripts, and this film has enough other strong points to transcend its mediocre material and become competent, if not creative, entertainment. Chief among its assets is Ned Beatty (Remember him in "Deliverance"?) who turns in an extraordinarily believable portrayal of a stereotyped, red-neck Southern sheriff (better, even, than Rod Stieger's in "In the Heat of the Night") with a habit of drowning "Commie" peace demonstrators who invade "his" county. (Unfortunately for Beatty, one departed peacenik had Reynolds for a brother.) Another plus is an effective use of the rural South and its people as a backdrop that lends some credible substance to the goings on. At The Village, Claremont.

At 7 she began competition that led to her apperance in two Olympics and five world championships while reigning as the five-time United States titlist after capturing her first crown at 15.

She now joins the Ice Follies lineup that includes Richard Dwyer, Mr. Frick and Snoopy of Peanuts fame.

Joel Grey to perform at Greek

LOS ANGELES — Academy Award-winner Joel Grey will head his own stage show at the Greek Theater at 8:30 p.m. Sept. 10-16.

Grey received the Oscar as Best Supporting Actor for his role as the master of ceremonies in "Cabaret." He is a singer and dancer as well as an actor.

Appearing with Grey will be the Little Angels from Korea. The Little Angels are children, 8 to 15, who dance, sing and drum their way through Korean legends and depictions of ancient customs and festivals.

Philharmonic to offer tribute to Reinhardt

HOLLYWOOD — Shakespeare and Mendelssohn will be combined in a tribute to Max Reinhardt, Austrian-born theatrical producer and director, at the Hollywood Bowl at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 30.

Reinhardt, who died in 1943, made Bowl history with his 1934 production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The Bowl celebrates the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Conductor Lawrence Foster will lead the Los Angeles Philharmonic in an all-Mendessohn program featuring, appropriately, the Overture and Incidental Music to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with British actress Rohan McCullough reciting selected texts from Shakespeare's play. Miss McCullough, who received her theatrical training at the Bristol Old Vic, has also performed in such diverse stage productions as "Hair" and "Rabelais." Her film credits include "Tomorrow" and the highly-acclaimed "Sunday, Bloody Sunday." Miss McCullough also gives frequent poetry recitals which she has titled "Rhyme & Reason."

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" will also feature sopranos Susan Belling and Andree Jordan and the women of the Roger Wagner Chorale.

Author Christopher Isherwood will speak about his personal and professional recollections of Reinhardt; young Israel violinist Pinchas Zukerman will play the Violin Concerto, and Foster and the Philharmonic will perform the "Ruy Blas" Overture.

Pocket veto of doctor bill ruled illegal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is expected to appeal a federal court decision declaring illegal President Nixon's "pocket" veto of 1970 legislation designed to train family doctors.

U.S. District Judge Joseph C. Waddy ruled Wednesday the pocket veto was improper because it frustrated Congress' constitutional right to attempt to override the veto.

The Constitution gives a President 10 days to sign or veto a bill after he gets it from Congress. If the period runs out while Congress is adjourned and the President has not signed the bill, it fails to become law on a pocket veto.

The 10-day period on the doctor bill ran out while Congress was recessed during Christmas, 1970. The court noted the veto occurred while Congress was in a brief recess but had not adjourned its session.

"...The short recess of the Senate in this case, extending only two days beyond the 10-day period . . . did not prevent the return of the bill to the Senate in which it originated," the judge ruled. "It follows therefore that the pocket veto was invalid."

The case was taken to court by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who argued that the pocket veto was improper under the circumstances because Congress reconvened soon after Christmas and would have had a chance to consider Nixon's action if he had used the regular veto.

The bill authorized a three-year, $225 million program to help train family doctors through grants to medical schools and hospitals.

Waddy directed the head of the General Services Administration and the White House chief of records to publish the bill as law. However, the money cannot be spent until a separate appropriation measure is passed.

Can teacher relax as a running mate?

Dear Walt: I have this one summer school teacher who I like and respect a great deal. Sometimes after morning classes we have been on the school track at the same time and ran together. He said it's lots more fun running with someone than by himself.

What I would like to know is would it be all right if I asked him if he'd like to meet me once or twice a week after summer school ends so we could still run together? I wouldn't want to have him do it just to make me happy. I'd only want him to do it if he really wanted to. (But how would I know if he was just being nice and doing it just because I asked him to?) —Steve

Dear Steve: Take your chances that teacher will mind his own "druthers" and accept or decline your proposal according to his own wishes. Dialogue: "Mr. C, I'm more liable to keep up my running with good company. If you're intersted in running and want a partner, I could time myself to be at the track when you were going to be here."

If he says yes, enjoy your sessions, but don't brag about your track mate to other students. From the innocent base of mutual interest, ugly accusations of "favoritism" have grown.—Walt

Dear Ele: I want to get a job and move out of here. The problem is that my father is getting very fresh and my mother won't believe it when I try to tell her. I have told my father to keep his hands off me, but he just inhales another beer and looks at me for a superlong time without saying one word. This is very creepy and is bothering my sleep a great deal.

Can you suggest anyplace that would hire me now? I am 15 and want to continue my education if at all possible. —Belinda

Dear Belinda: Take your problem to the relative who has the most influence over dad. (grandmother? uncle?). If there is no such authority figure living in the area, share your malaise with a clergyman, or mental health or family service counselor. By talking out the circumstances when dad gets fresh, you may be able to modify some aspect of your dress or behaviour that triggers his unwelcome advances.

If you cannot detect a turn on cause, your counselor may offer to rap with dad and alert him to the fact that others are aware of and concerned about his response to you. This probalby will be sufficient deterrent to block further passes. Let's hope it does, because space in foster homes or "institutional" homes is hard to come by, and few jobs are open to 15-years-olds.

Dear Ele and Walt: What would you do if you suspected that a certain present might be stolen but you had no way of getting proof. The boy keep asking when I'm going to wear it?—Vicki

Dear Vicki: It would probaly be wisest to return the gift to thegiver on grounds that it was too expensive or persoanl a gift for the depth of your relationship.

If that was untrue, you'd be forced to either say "it isn't my style" or confess your doubts re: its genuine ownership. The latter suggestion is placed last because by your own judgment you have no solid base for your suspicions. "I just have this feeling that this stolen goods," is mighty heavy to land on someone. —Ele and Walt

THERE GOES NO. 702

Bowie balks at giving interleague play okay

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — By the powers vested in him as baseball commissioner, Bowie Kuhn decided not to exercise any at all, thereby delighting the National League, dismaying the American, and killing off any possible chance of interleague play next year.

Kuhn did all this by simply declining to vote yes or no Thursday when the American League pressed him to do so in the deadlock with the National League over whether regular season inter-league play should be introduced next season.

"I did not vote it down. I did not vote it up," Kuhn said after the 45 minute closing session of baseball's summer meetings.

"Instead, I have created a special steering committee of five members, two club owners from each league and the commissioner, to have the authority to consider any and all aspects of professional baseball, including the subject of inter-league play, and to report back to the annual meetings in Houston with whatever recommendations they might make."

Thus Kuhn definitely avoided a showdown over whether he has the power to vote when the two leagues are deadlocked over an item such as interleague play. The American League thought he did. The National League thought he didn't.

He posed the question to the owners Thursday, speaking of himself as a third party, and answered himself immediately:

"It's more a question of wisdom. Assuming he does have the power to cast such a vote, he isn't inclined to at this time."

A general silence greeted the statement and Kuhn then proposed his "Blue Ribbon Committee."

"I think it has an extremely important mission to perform for baseball," he said. "It's important that its power is unlimited in the areas in which it can make recommendations.

"It's free to go into interleague play if it wants to. It's free not to if it wants to. I would expect it to range fairly widely into baseball matters."

The result was a National League victory. That league wanted no action on the American League proposal to continue a special inter-league committee so that a definite recommendation could be made. That's exactly what happened.

If there was any doubt, it was dispelled when National League President Chub Feeney left the meeting room with a broad grin on his face. American League President Joe Cronin was frowning.

Allan H. "Bud" Selig president of the Milwaukee Brewers and a member of the interleague committee, was also disappointed, though he tried to conceal it.

His committee had considered a half dozen plans ranging from four games to 18 for each club on an inter-league basis. No specific plan was proposed, but Selig said the four-game proposal seemed to be the most "pragmatic."

He said the committee, especially National League representatives Feeney and Francis Dale of the Cincinnati Reds, had worked extremely hard since the committee was formed six months ago.

"I was hopeful of some sort of implementation," Selig said. "But I do feel the work we have done will stand baseball in good stead in the future. It has been an important input into the thinking of inter-league play and major league alignment."

Selig was a leading proponent of inter-league play. His league voted unanimously for it.

It's fate was doomed Tuesday, however, when the National League met and unanimously rejected the concept. The league reaffirmed its stand Wednesday and relayed its feelings to the joint session Thursday.

Kuhn said he did not vote, not only because of the question of whether he had the power to do so, but because "at this point I thought there were too many problems with respect to the proposal for favorable action to be taken at this time. I have left the question open as to whether I would take a different view at a different time.

UCLA's Harmon explains the Wishbone

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

ANAHEIM — "Learning the Wishbone is basically like learning to dance." Mark Harmon, UCLA quarterback, was the speaker.

Harmon, along with coach Pepper Rodgers and wide receiver Norman Andersen, were the featured guest speakers Thursday at the weekly public sports luncheon at Anaheim.

The young signal caller's remark was a throw away line in a question and answer session. But it intrigued the writer who cornered Harmon afterwards and asked for amplification.

"There's so much geometry involved in it," the handsome son of Michigan Great Tom Harmon and actress Elyse Knox began. Then he explained the way the famed Wishbone-T formation is taught and practiced . . at least at UCLA.

"It's all angles and planes and different procedures and things like that," he continued. "At UCLA we have a stretch of astroturf about 40 yards wide and what we do is mark out with white paint on it the different angles, different positions for, say, the guard, the tackle, and the fullback to start off with and the course and direction they're supposed to follow through the basic Wishbone play."

Harmon went on to reveal the precision with which plays are run.

"What this basically does is, if you take away the lines, you run the exact course, not even varying inches of where you're supposed to go. The Wishbone is an offense of angles and exactness."

Following this memorized "roadmap" Harmon and his UCLA teammates went from a 2-7 season in 1971 (Before the Wishbone was installed) to an 8-3 record last year.

The Bruins were second only to Oklahoma in nationally in ground-gaining. Rodgers' team ran for more yards, 3,810, than any other team in either Pac-8 or UCLA history. They averaged 5.9 yards per play.

Kermit Johnson and James McAlister, the top runners, gained 989 and 825 yards respectively. The quarterbacks, Harmon and Rob Scribner (now with the Rams) gained 521 and 511 yards.

"I don't compare myself to my father," Harmon said in answer to a question from the audience and explained why. "He was one of the greatest backs in college football. In the 40 yard dash my speed is 4.7."

The young quarterback also revealed that he rarely ever calls any of the plays himself. "I call maybe one half of one percent of the plays. And that is when I audiblize, and it was mostly in the USC game," he added with a grin.

Rodgers assumed a protective stance at this admission. "Now Mark is a nice young man who doesn't want to hurt anyone's feelings," the coach said. "In the huddle, he's got the halfback saying 'I can break a long run! The guard is saying 'I can beat the tackle.! "

"The wide receiver is telling him, 'I can beat their defensive backs,' and the fullback is saying 'gimme the ball.' So I call the plays and they can all hate me."

UCLA opens its season in a nationally televised game with Nebraska Sept. 15. Rodgers says, "last year we beat Nebraska because Nebraska made some mistakes and turned the ball over to us and we didn't make any mistakes. We're a better team this year and to beat us Nebraska is going to have to play better than we do."

And there was the usual Rodgers humer. When master of ceremonies Terry Phillips pretended to read from a card but ad libed a question of his own, Rodgers grabbed the card and did some ad libbing of his own.

"It doesn't say that at all," he said innocently. "It says do you think with your fantastic coaching you can take this group of ordinary players and make something out of them."

Then he grinned and added, "and it's signed Judy (Mrs. Pepper) Rodgers."

U.S. cagers score again in runaway over Sweden

MOSCOW (UPI) — The United States men's basketball team scored its second consecutive runaway victory at the World University Games today with a 120-31 rout of Sweden.

The taller and more experienced Americans dominated every phase of the mismatch and permitted the Swedes just two baskets in the first 10 minutes of play. Halftime score was 57 to 17.

"It was a good morning workout, but not much more," U.S. Head Coach Ed Badger said.

Tom Burleson, the 7-foot-4 center from North Carolina State, led the balanced U.S. scoring attack with 24 points. All American forward David Thompson, also of North Carolina State, netted 21 and Marvin Barnes of Providence added 18.

In all, the Americans had six players in double figures, the same number they had Thursday when they beat Britain 123 - 74 in another preliminary match.

"They weren't very good competition but I still think we did a lot of things well," Badger said. "Our fast break was working and we were moving the ball very well. I also liked our defense. The Swedes were simply too afraid to shoot."

Badger pulled starting guard Gus Bailey of Texas-El Paso after five minutes of the first half. The coach said later Bailey had a bad cold.

Kay Carlsson scored eight points for Sweden, who lost three of their starting players to fouls during the game. Sweden finished with 34 fouls, three more than their point total.

The United States has now won 13 straight games, including 11 wins over teams from Bulgaria, Poland and Czechoslovakia on a tour preceding the games.

Russia may lose Olympics bid

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union will lose its bid to host the 1980 Olympic Games if it insists on barring some foreign newsmen as it has done for the World University Games, the International Olympic Committee Chairman said today.

Lord Killanin, a former Fleet Street journalist who now heads the IOC, told a news conference, "The barring of journalists would not be in keeping with the Olympic spirit."

The Soviets denied entry visas to Israeli and South Korean journalists who applied to accompany their national squads at the 61-nation University games which began Wednesday.

"I dont know all the facts in this case, but whoever is allocated the 1980 games must conform to our regulations," the gray-haired, portly Irish nobleman said.

Moscow applied to host the 1976 summer games, but lost out to a bid by Montreal. The Soviets have been actively campaigning ever since to host the 1980 Olympics. Killanin said Soviet officials "intimated" they intended to apply formally to stage the games.

He called the Soviet athletic facilities "extremely good," but added applications to be host would not be accepted until next March 31, with a decision not being made until next fall.

THE HIGH ROAD

Philadelphia running back Po James leaps over the Pittsburgh line in Thursday's exhibition. It didn't do much good, however as the Steelers prevailed. (See story, C-4)

Dodgers, Angels return to action

Both the Dodgers and the Angels return to action today after having Thursday off.

The Dodgers were slated to send Andy Messersmith (11-7) against the Chicago Cubs in day baseball at Wrigley Field. Bill Bonham (4-4), the former UCLA star, was listed as the likely Chicago starter although the Cubs' pitching staff is in a shambles after allowing 25 runs in the last two days against Atlanta.

The Dodgers put a four-game winning streak on the line against the potentially hard-hitting Cubs.

Nolan Ryan (13-14) gets the nod tonight at Anaheim Stadium as the Angels open a 11-game homestand against the Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers will counter with Jim Perry (11-10). Detroit is battling for the Eastern Division title while the Angels are trying to stop a slide that began prior to the All-Star break.

Joe Sweet of the Rams in battle to establish identity

FULLERTON — Joe Sweet's battle for an identity is constant.

He has this recurring thought that when fans are listing the Rams' excellent receiver corps, someone will pop up to say, "Who's Joe Sweet?"

Often overlooked among Ram wide receiver stars such as Harold Jackson, Jack Snow and Dick Gordon — along with the absent Lance Rentzel —Sweet doesn't have "the big name" of the others but nevertheless is a swift tricky foe for Ram opponents.

"I'm not as loquacious as some of the players either," Sweet said, with a smile, "so I haven't had the publicity of some of the others."

Ram quarterback John Hadl knows well who Sweet is, though. He found Joe with a bomb that went for a 45-yard touchdown play Saturday evening against the Cleveland Browns.

"Jackson and I were both running post patterns," Sweet related. "Harold was the primary receiver, but he was covered so Hadl unloaded it to me."

Sweet doubtless will be back running post patterns for the Rams in Saturday's exhibition against the Oakland Raiders in Berkeley. The game will be televised at 1 p.m. on Channel 2.

It seems certain that Sweet will be used at receiver sometime during the game against the Raiders, but fans will be able to see him before that on the Rams special team.

Joe was one of the stars on the special teams last year. He led the squad for the most tackles on kicks in preseason games last summer. Sweet was the player who sped downfield to tackle Neil Craig of the Cincinnati Bengals in the end zone during a game in the regular season. His contribution against the Bengals helped the Rams emerge with a 15-12 win.

He caught several passes in the victory over Philadelphia but suffered a bruised disc in his back that still bothers him to a degree. In his rookie season of 1971, Joe caught two passes, one of them a 17-yarder for a touchdown against the Minnesota Vickings.

The work on the special teams and his occasional appearances in the lineup would be frustrating to many players, but Joe's philosophy is to take things day by day.

"If I try as hard as I can in practice, I should get a chance," he reasoned."Then if I try to take advantage of my opportunity by playing as hard as I can, maybe I'll get another chance.

Joe's goal is to be one of the best receivers in the National Football League.

Overshadowed by Jackson, Snow and Gordon, Sweet is still aware of his own potentials. "I ran a 4.3 against Jim Marsellis (Chiefs) when we were both at Tennessee State," he said. "In full (football) gear, I've been timed in 4.5 in the 40."

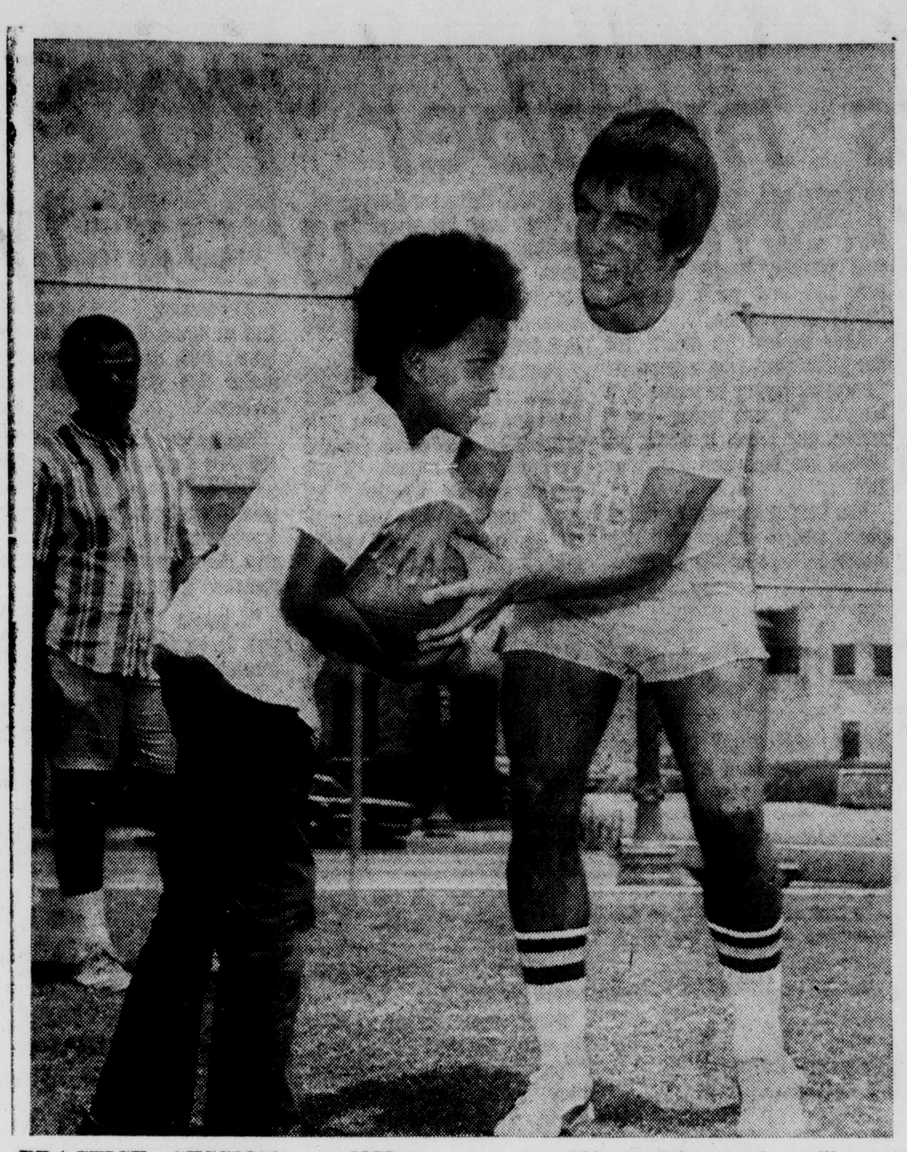

Sweet, however, does not regard speed as his main asset as a receiver. "I think it's my coordination. That's the greatest gift I've had from God — and that's the way I look at it, as a gift.

"The coordination has helped me in my moves. At Tennessee State, I was usually against Marsellis in practice, and he played me three or four yards off the line of scrimmage. To get past him, I had to have the moves."

With this confidence in his coordination to move his feet quickly at 6-feet-2, 196 pounds. Joe sat down with a pencil and paper before going to the Rams' Cal State Fullerton training camp this summer and designed different plays for himself to utilize in one-on-one moves against a defensive back.

The moves he put down on paper were to be used in escaping his defender to run the prescribed pattern called by thequarterback.

"I got myself ready mentally," he said, "for the moves I would use physically."

PRACTICE SESSION — UCLA quarterback Mark Harmon gets in an early workout with one of his fans recently. The senior will be among 120 candidates who will report to coach Pepper Rogers Saturday. The Bruins begin two-a-day practices Monday.

Anaya may have to outlast Pinder

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If Romeo Anaya, World Boxing Association bantamweight champion, can't knock out Panama's Enrique Pinder Saturday night in their title bout, he expects to go full speed for 15 rounds.

Anaya has been doing a lot of roadwork to build up his endurance. On Wednesday of this week he did no boxing but ran five miles to help his wind.

"He's so sharp I don't want him boxing any more," said his manager Cristobal Rosas.

Anaya, who made his living painting autos in Tuxtla Gutierrez, Mexico, up until 10 months ago, won the 118-pound title by kayoing Pinder in Panama City last Jan. 20, in the third round.

The hard-hitting Mexican has flattened 29 of his 38 opponents. Anaya's record is 35-3. Pinder's record is 36-4-2 with 16 kayos.

Neither fighter is expected to have any trouble making the 118 pound limit at the weigh-in Saturday at the Elks Building. It will be open to the public.

Observers were amused by the jockeying among manager and fighters to insure a "fair shake" from officials.

Pinder's manager, Isaac Kresh, asked the California Athletic Commission to get an out-of-state referee but he was turned down.

Forum promoter Don Fraser said, "The commission rejected his request for two reasons. One, it was filed too late and two, the commissioners think California referees are most competent and experienced. They don't take a back seat to any officials, anywhere."

Kresh and his 26-year-old battler were motivated by a split decision he received in a fight with Chucho Castillo last November in his only prior appearance in this area. He scored a victory by 2-1 but both Kresh and Pinder said they felt the decision should have been unanimous.

It was believed the commission will select a referee from among the following—Rudy Mordan, George Latka, John Thomas, Dick Young, and Larry Rozadilla. These are the men who customarily handle title fights in Southern California.

Anaya and his handlers wanted the fight to be held in Mexico so selection of the Forum in nearby Inglewood was a compromise.

"In Panama, it takes a knockout to win," said Anaya meaningfully. "In Los Angeles, I can win a decision."

A crowd of about 10,000 is expected.

There are three other bantamweight fights on the card— Rodolfo Martinez against the French champion Guy Caudron; Rogelio Lara versus Benny "Memin" Rodriguez of Los Angeles; and Davey Pierson versus Rafael Gonzalez, a pair of newcomers.

Champ looks good in first workout

TOKYO (UPI) — World heavyweight champion George Foreman turned in an impressive power-packed workout today in his first training session here for his first title defense Sept. 1 against Joe "King" Roman of Puerto Rico at the Nihon Budokan Hall.

Foreman, 24, who won his title when he knocked out Joe Frazier in the second round last January in Kingston, Jamaica, sparred two rounds with Len Hutchins, the World Boxing Association (WBA) ninth-ranking light heavyweight from Kalamazoo, Mich., and then a round with Henry Harris, heavyweight from Kingston.

Earlier, Foreman did roadwork for 40 minutes at Heiji Park, near the National Stadium where the opening and closing ceremonies of the 1964 Tokyo Olympic Games were held.

Roman is expected to arrive in Japan Saturay night.

Foreman was all business. The champion concentrated on his left jabs while he danced to his left around the ring and also worked on short punches.

Hutchins, whom Foreman has described as an outstanding contender for the word ing contender for the world [illegible] too small for the champion. Foreman did not punch hard and traded some light body punches, showing good defense.

Foreman took it easy in his one round with Harris, concentrating on left and right swings to the body.

Heavyweight Larry Frazier of California was ready to appear next but Foreman put him off until Saturday. Foreman then punched the bag before ending his first day's workout.

Red Devils lose baseball, soccer coach

POMONA — Verne Davidson, head baseball and soccer coach last year for Pomona High, has resigned his positions to take a full-time teaching job at Moreau High in Hayward, it was announced this week.

Davidson, who also was an assistant football coach for the Red Devil varsity, will take on the head coaching position for soccer at Moreau while also working as an assistant football coach.

In addition to his coaching duties at the Northern California high school, Vern will be teaching world history.

Davidson has been at Pomona High for the past three years, coaching "B" football and track in his first year. The "Bs" went undefeated that year under his leadership.

In 1972, the Pomona athletic department created a soccer program, and Davidson obtained the head coaching position right from the start.

Then last season, Vern took over the resigning Gordon Taylor as head Red Devil baseball coach.

Davidson and his family will be heading for Hayward late next week, and Vern will start his duties as assistant football coach a few days later.

He also taught as a substitute teacher last year at Emerson Jr. High.

Aaron thinks he'll beat Ruth's mark next year

By United Press International

Hank Aaron has given up hope that he will equal or surpass Babe Ruth's all-time home run record this season but is confident that he will achieve the feat in 1974.

"I don't really think it's possible that I'll reach the record this year," said Aaron after hitting his 29th of the season and the 702nd of his career in the Atlanta Braves' 10-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs Thursday. "There aren't enough games left for me to do it this season.

"I would like to hit five or six more this season," he continued, "and then go for the record next year. I don't think I've got a good chance to hit 13 more homers this season."

Aaron's homer Thursday, his first since July 31, came off reliever Jack Aker and capped a nine-run eighth-inning outburst which enabled the Braves to deal the Cubs their 11th straight loss and 14th in their last 15 games. It came on a 2-2 pitch and sailed about 400 feet into the left field bleachers at Wrigley Field.

The San Francisco Giants defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 in the other National League game Thursday while the Oakland A's beat the Boston Red Sox 6-3 and the Cleveland Indians topped the Kansas City Royals 10-4 in American League games.

Aaron has hit 29 homers in the Braves' 124 games so far this season and that pace projected against his remaining 38 games would mean that he would end the season with 711— three short of Ruth's mark.

Tom Bradley received credit for his 10th win with the relief help of Elias Sosa in the Giants' victory over the Phillies. Ken Brett went the distance for the Phillies and suffered his fifth loss against 12 victories. Bob Boone homered for the Phillies.

Vida Blue, coming on strong after his poor 1972 season, pitched a four-hitter and Reggie Jackson drove in four runs with two homers for the A's. The victory raised Blue's record to 13-7, including four straight wins, while Jackson raised his RBI total to 98.

Ron Lolich drove in four runs with two doubles and a single and Chris Chambliss extended his hitting streak to 17 games with a homer and a single in the Indians' victory. The loss dropped the Royals one percentage point behind Oakland in the AL West.

Ram rookies hurt, out of Raider game

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams said two starting defensive backs have suffered sprained ankles and are doubtful starters for Saturday's pre-season game against the Oakland Raiders.

Rookies Eddie McMillan and Cullen Bryant, the Rams' top draft choice in 1973, injured their ankles in Wednesday's workout, but it wasn't until they tried to run on them Thursday that it was learned the sprains were more serious than first believed.

If they can not play, their positions will be filled by veterans, cornerback Jim Nettles and free safety Roger Williams.

The Rams asked for waivers Thursday on rookie defensive back Edsel Garrison, the former USC football player and sprinter.

Lee scores hole-in-one

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI) — Pre-tournament favorite Lee Trevino sank a hole-in-one today on the par three 185-yard first hole as the $200,000 USI Classic entered its second round at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Trevino, one of the early starters, used a six iron for his opening shot of the day. The ball hit the pin and dropped into the cup, bringing a roar from the large gallery following him.

The No. 1 hole has often been troublesome for Trevino. In Thursday's opening round he settled for a bogey there after hitting his tee shot into the trees to the right of the green.

Today's ace put Trevino two under par through 19 holes of the 72 hole tourney.

Bills open stadium without O.J.

By United Press International

The Buffalo Bills open their new 80,000-seat Rich Stadium tonight against the Washington Redskins without their biggest star.

O.J. Simpson, the National Football League's leading rusher last season and Player of the Year in the American Conference, will miss tonight's game with a broken rib.

Buffalo has had its offensive problems during the preseason, failing to score a touchdown in a pair of losses, and Coach Lou Saban will test rookie Joe Ferguson at quarterback tonight against the NFC champions.

Ferguson, the Bills' No. 3 draft pick from Arkansas, will start ahead of veteran Dennis Shaw. The Bills, weak at running back with injuries to Simpson and Randy Jackson, Thursday acquired veteran Larry Watkins from Philadelphia for linebacker Dick Cunningham.

In the only pre-season action Thursday, Philadelphia's boo-birds joined the Pittsburgh Steelers in feasting on the carcasses of quarterbacks John Reaves and Roman Gabriel as the Steelers won 17-3.

Reaves, in his second year, threw three interceptions in the first half and Gabriel, the highpriced acquisition from Los Angeles, found out why the Steeler defense is ranked among the best in the league as he completed only 2-of-13 passes and spent most of the night on his back checking the stars over Philadelphia.

"Gabriel is going to get shellshocked," said new Eagle Coach Mike McCormack. "Every time Gabriel threw it, they picked him off the seat of his pants."

Terry Hanratty relieved starter Terry Bradshaw at quarterback late in the third period and directed Pittsburgh to pair of quick scores that sealed the game. Hanratty threw a 52-yard TD pass to Ron Shanklin and set up Roy Gerela's 43-yard field goal. Preston Pearson drove six yards for the first Steeler score while Tom Dempsey's 47-yard field goal accounted for the Eagles' points.

Pittsburgh's defense has surrendered only one touchdown in three games.

In other pre-season action this weekend, Baltimore takes on Detroit at Memphis, Houston meets Green Bay at Milwaukee, Oakland plays Los Angeles at Berkeley, Calif., St. Louis is at Denver, Minnesota at Kansas City, Chicago at Miami, New England at Atlanta and New Orleans at Dallas, all on Saturday. On Sunday, the New York Giants and the New York Jets tangle in New Haven, Conn., Cleveland meets Cincinnati at Columbus, Ohio, and San Diego is at San Francisco.

In news from the camps on Thursday, veteran safety Bryant Salter walked out of the San Diego camp without explanation. Charger Coach Harland Svare said Salter will be fined $150 for every day's training he misses.

The New York Jets said veteran Don Maynard, the leading receiver in NFL history, will make his first start of the exhibition season against the Giants Sunday, Maynard, who broke in with the Giants in 1958, reported late to camp.

New England traded wide receiver Tom Reynolds and linebacker Ken Lee to Chicago for draft choices and Cleveland announced that veteran Canadian player Hugh McKinnis would start at running back Sunday in place of injured Bo Scott.

Dick Shiner, battling Pat Sullivan for the quarterback job at Atlanta, will start for the Falcons against New England Saturday night and Bob Berry, traded away by Atlanta after last season, will be at quarterback in place of Fran Tarkenton for Minnesota in a nationally-televised contest against Kansas City Saturday night.

Los Angeles will play against Oakland with two starting defensive backs, Eddie McMillan and Cullen Bryant, both rookies, doubtful with injuries. The Rams also asked waivers on Edesel Garrison, a former star receiver at Southern California.

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Kenesaw Mountain Landis keeps growing wiser and wiser as the years go on.

It doesn't seem to matter that he has been dead better than 25 years now, he keeps getting smarter all the time.

The old Judge.

Crusty, craggy-faced and with those long, bony arms of his folded across the top of the railing so he could support his chin in them while he watched the ball game, the man who was baseball's first commissioner presumably never made a mistake in his entire stewardship.

If you buy that then you obviously also are ready to believe that all 16 clubowners of his day were so enraptured with the shaggy-haired old judge that they continuously went around congratulating themselves for having the good sense to hire him.

The truth is they didn't feel that way at all.

As a matter of fact they criticized him as often and as loud, maybe even louder, than some of today's owners do Bowie Kuhn.

To illustrate the type individual Landis was, the story often is told how he once fined the Standard Oil Company a million dollars while he still was sitting on the Federal bench.

That is a fact.

But the fine was overturned on appeal in another court and the oil company never paid a nickel.

That also is a fact, but somehow becomes lost in the re-telling.

Even with his substantial legal background, Landis knew enough to seek advice from counsel before rendering any major decision while he was baseball commissioner.

It is well known how much store he put in the particular phrase which he felt defined his powers. That phrase is the one in baseball's constitution which says the commissioner shall have the power to make any decision he considers to be "in the best interst of baseball."

Landis once asked one of his attorneys what he thought that meant specifically.

"Anything you can get away with," replied the lawyer.

The Judge always remembered that.

Bowie Kuhn may be well advised to remember the same thing.

The point comes up now because of the posture he took Thursday here in the deadlock between the American and National Leagues over whether inter-league play should be inaugurated next season.

The American League said yes.

The National League said no.

Now it was up to the commissioner. The National League insisted he really had no power in the matter. The American League was equally insistent he had, and put him on the spot by calling for him to vote one way or the other.

Bowie Kuhn, the lawyer, knew the legal problems involved.

He could vote yes with the American League and be challenged, legally, by the National.

Or he could vote no and be accused of being reactionary and betraying the American League.

He examined all the avenues open to him and his long legal training told him one thing.

Don't vote at all.

That's what he did. Naturally, there was some unhappiness among the American Leaguers, who figured he was playing it nice and safe.

Some of Kuhn's critics now say he was afraid to go along with the AL and thereby alienate some of the stronger-willed people in the NL. Walter O'Malley for one.

I don't think Bowie Kuhn is that much afraid.

Cautious, yes; afraid, no.

Personally, inter-league play strikes me as a fairly good idea. The fans seem to be for it also. There are a few bugs in some of the proposals presented by its advocates, but they probably could be worked out.

Actually there's no real way of telling how Judge Landis would've voted in this matter.

Maybe he would've seen how much he could have gotten away with.

Maybe Bowie Kuhn should've too.

Aaron hammers number 702

CHICAGO (UPI) — Hank Aaron, battling the jinx of No. 13, doesn't expect to shatter Babe Ruth's career home run record of 714 this year.

But the Atlanta Braves slugger, nearing the age of 40, won't rule out the chance that he'll beat the jinx and whack No. 715 some time next season.

Aaron hammered career No. 702 Thursday with teammates Mike Lum and Darrell Evans on base to cap a nine-run eighth inning for the Braves and help propel them to a 10-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs, extending the Cubs' losing streak to 11 games.

Then he confessed, "I don't really think it's possible that I'll reach the record this year. There aren't that many games left. I would like to hit five or six more this season and then go for the record next year. I don't think I've got a good chance to hit 13."

Aaron's homer, his 29th this season, came on a high fast ball thrown by Cubs hurler Jack Aker and Aaron said it made him "glad to get off No. 13. I've been sitting there for a long long time, and I was beginning to think it was unlucky."

The 13 referred to the number of homers he needs to tie and then break Ruth's record. Thursday's drive left him 12 short of the 714 Ruth hung up and 13 short of the new mark.

"I'm sure the pitch wasn't where Aker wanted it," he said. "I think he was trying to waste one, and he got it too close, in the strike zone. He's usually a good sinker ball pitcher, keeps the ball low, and he'd made two real good pitches to me."

Aker agreed he didn't get the pitch where he wanted it. "I wasn't trying to waste it," he said. "I was trying for a strike, but I got it about 18 inches too high and that was it."

The homer came on the 2-2 pitch, and it helped convince Aaron he was ready to make a stretch drive for the record.

"I've been concentrating on getting my timing back," he said. "I haven't been hitting the ball good, and I haven't been swinging good until the last couple of games.

Part of his problem, he conceded, might be due to the pressure and excitement generated by his drive toward the home run record. "I get out for batting practice," he said, "and I have to talk to 15 or 16 reporters and radio men. I can't concentrate. I've got to sit down and get myself straightened out.

"I didn't take batting practice before the game (Thursday) because it was no use. I had to make this radio interview, talk to this reporter, make this picture and that picture."

But he was affable after the 400 plus foot drive out of the park. A 15 year old boy, he said, brought the ball to a policeman who brought it to Aaron. He signed the ball and returned it to the boy.

"I guess he thought there was some money involved or something," Aaron said.

In Atlanta, there would have been. The Braves pay a silver dollar for each of his home runs thus far when he hits one in their home park. Thus had Thursday's drive been at home, the boy would have received 702 silver dollars. In Chicago's Wrigley Field, where Aaron now has hit 39 homers, more than in any other foreign park, it was worth zero. He has hit 84 homers against Cubs pitching.

The Cubs' losing streak put manager Whitey Lockman on the verge of a personal record too. In 1951, the New York Giants, for whom he was paying, lost 11 straight games.

"That's the longest I've ever had," he said. Today the Cubs must try to break it against the Western Division leading Los Angeles Dodgers, who have won six of nine previous games with Chicago.

Celts sign Cowens to no-cut pact

BOSTON (UPI) — Arnold "Red" Auerbach would be happy to see Dave Cowens spend the rest of his basketball career in a Boston Celtics uniform.

Auerbach, general manager of the Boston team, Thursday signed the 6-foot-8 Cowens, to a three-year, no cut contract. Cowens, last year won the National Basketball Association Most Valuable Player Award in only his third year as a pro.

Although no specific terms were made public, Auerbach did say that Cowens received an increase from last year's pact.

"We're both happy with the contract," said Auerbach. "If anyone deserves anything like that, it's him. We feel that he's going to go down in history as one of the greatest players in the game and we hope he plays all his basketball in Boston."

Cowens, who was the Celtics' first round draft choice for the 1970-1971 season, shared Rookie of the Year honors with Geoff Petrie of the Portland Trail Blazers. In Cowens' first year with the Celtics, the team rebounded from a dismal season to post a winning record. The following year, Boston won its division title and advanced to the semifinal round of the NBA playoffs.

In his third year, he helped lead the Celtics to the best regular season record in their history. He earned Most Valuable Player honors in both the annual All-Star game and for the season.

"He typifies all we stand for," Auerbach said. "He's prepared to play and everything he prepares for, he prepares for well."

Auerbach compared Cowens to other athletes by saying, "Some become successful and they think they've got it made. They spend their off-season lolling around. Not Dave, however, because he prepares for everything well."

Both said there was no difficulty in agreeing to terms for the contract.

"Dave came in with a bargainer," said Auerbach, "but there were no fights.

Fergie says he wants to be traded

CHICAGO (UPI) —Chicago Cubs righthander Fergie Jenkins said Thursday he would like to be traded to the Detroit Tigers.

Jenkins, who threw four bats onto the field in an angry outburst during Wednesday's game with the Atlanta Braves, said he was tired of criticism from some fans and local sports writers that he wasn't "trying hard enough." He said he was just having a bad year and so were his teammates.

The 29-year-old pitcher, now 10-12 on the season, said he would rather pitch for the Tigers than the Cubs because of the Detroit fans, who he described as "great."

Another reason he would like to play for the Tigers is the location. His home town of Chatham, Ontario, is only 50 miles from Detroit.

Jenkins, a 20-game winner for six consecutive seasons, also apparently was upset over Manager Whitey Lockman's decision to start Burt came in and said what they wanted, and it's not unreasonable at all. Besides, he's the type of player who would give it all he's got even if you gave him a 10-year contract with a raise every year."

Gabe can't pass; Eagles lose again

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — When you've got a powerhouse like Pittsburgh Steeler Coach Chuck Noll has, you don't have to spend your time correcting mistakes the way rebuilder Mike McCormack does with the Philadelphia Eagles.

After Thursday night's 17-3 triumph over the Eagles for their second exhibition victory in three games, the Steelers are honing themselves for the defense of their American Football Conference Central Division title. McCormack and his team are still trying to reform their ways after three poor showings and a 1-2 record.

It was a fumble by veteran punter Tom McNeill on a routine center snap on the Eagle 33 that put the Steelers into position for their first touchdown on a six-yard burst by Preston Pearson. The TD gave them the lead after they trailed 3-0 at halftime on a 47-yard field goal by Tom Dempsey.

Terry Hanratty, who relieved Bradshaw late in the third period, threw a 52-yard bomb to Ron Shanklin on his third play. Roy Gerela, who failed on three earlier field goal tries, made it 17-3 on a 43-yard kick that struck the cross bar and bounced into the end zone.

The Eagles started quarterback John Reaves, who says he is still battling Roman Gabriel for the No. 1 job, but he threw three first half interceptions which kept the Eagles from getting their offense moving.

Gabriel completed only 2-of-13 passes and is still looking for his first good game since coming from the Los Angeles Rams.

"Gabriel is going to get shellshocked," said McCormack, pointing to the fact that Gabriel consistently has been plagued by poor field position. "Every time Gabriel threw it, they picked him off the seat of his pants."

"It's been a long, dry spell," Gabriel mused. "It has to change—it has to change."

Veteran A.L. hitters get reprieve under new D.H. rule

By United Press International

Many major league baseball players who couldn't field or were too slow afoot and one step away from retirement, were given a reprieve this season when the American League adopted the designated hitter rule.

Now sluggers like Orlando Cepeda of the Boston Red Sox, Deron Johnson of the Oakland A's, Frank Howard of the Detroit Tigers and Frank Robinson of the California Angels are earning their salaries just with the bat. Yet their importance to their respective teams must be recognized and William Loeb, publisher of the Manchester Union Leader in New Hampshire has offered to do just that.

Loeb dreamed up the idea of a Most Valuable Designated Hitter Award to be presented to a player chosen by baseball writers. Loeb has formally made a request to AL president Joe Cronin to have the inaugrual presentation after the 1973 season. A prize of $1,000 will also be donated by Loeb to the winner.

United Press International interviewed several designated hitters around the league to get their reaction to Loeb's proposal. All but one of those polled favored the idea.

Cepeda, whose carved up knees have limited him to a trot while running the bases, would be the leading candidate to win the award.

"It seems like a good idea," said Cepeda, the most successful of the DH's with a batting average of .300, 18 home runs and 71 runs batted in as of August 15. "I like it. I wouldn't push for it but if it was put in, it would be a good idea."

Johnson, who was sitting on the bench with the Philadelphia Phillies in the National League before being given a new life with the A's, disagrees with Cepeda.

"I don't think it's such a good idea," he said. "Not all the clubs have just one designated hiiter and it's not fair for those who alternate. I don't think the designated hitter should be singled out. Except that he does not play the field, he's just like a regular ball player."

"I think it would be great to have an award honoring the designated hitter," said Howard. "It would be a real good gesture to honor a guy like Cepeda who I would pay to see myself."

Robinson, the only player in baeball history to win Most Valuable Player Award in both the American and Nationa leagues, agrees that the cash prize is a good idea but believes designated hitters should be eligible for the regular MVP.

"That's a very good idea," said Robinson when he was told of Loeb's offer to give $1,000 to the best DH in the American League, "but I doubt if I'd have much of a shot at it this year against guys like Cepeda or Johnson. They've both been having superb years.

"But I don't see why there shoud be a separate award. Designated hitters should be as eligible for the MVP as any other player. MVP's are voted on not for their fielding but for their hitting. Nobody ever won the MVP because of his glove. Hitting is the name of the game and if a desingated hitter is winning ball games with his bat then he should be given an equeal chance at the MVP with other players."

Tony Oliva, a three-time batting champion with the Minnesota Twins who has been forced into DH duty because of knee surgery, says, "I think it's tough to be a designated hitter. You feel out of place not playing in the game. I go into the clubhouse during the game to swing a bat and other excercises to keep loose. I thought I might be playing the outfield by this time of the year but now I have to wait until next year.

"There is no question it's been a good rule for me because my knees haven't been strong enough to play ever day. It would bring some recognition to the designated hitter if there was a reward. I would like to see it and would be proud to win it."

Jim Ray Hart, the one-time hard hitting third baseman of the San Francisco Giants who has been set back by injuries throughout his career, is now performing as the designated hitter for the New York Yankees.

"It's a great idea," said Hart. "I wouldn't mind a piece of that. I'll have to do a little better though to have a chance. Right now Cepeda looks like a sure thing.

"There ought to be a seperate award. A lot of people I guess wouldn't vote for a designated hitter for MVP because they'd feel he's only playing half the game. The DH has become an important part of the game and the best should be recognized, if not with the MVP, then with a special award."

Other quotes came from players and baseball people around the American League.

Gail Hopkins, Kansas City Royals: "If somebody wants to spend some money I'm sure there will be some ball player who will accept it."

Rick Reichardt, Kansas City Royals: "It sounds like Cepeda is a shoo-in for that but the guy who has been the most valuable DH in my opinion is Deron Johnson."

Hal McRae, Kansas City Royals: "If a guy wants to give away some money there's nothing wrong with that. Cepeda probably should win it."

Jack McKeon, manager of the Royals: "Right now, you're looking at Deron Johnson, Orlando Cepeda, or Tommie Davis. I use my DH to keep guys fresh and ready but if I had Johnson or Cepeda I would use them all of the time, too."

Phil Segui, General Manager of the Indians: "I think this will provide an incentive that goes along with a job well done. The designated hitter is an important thing in our league and I think the proposal of such an award has merit."

Laura Baugh goes after first LPGA tourney title

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Young Laura Baugh was hoping for a lucky seven today in quest of her first LPGA tournament title in the $30,000 St. Paul Ladies Open at Keller Golf Course.

It is the seventh tournament the 18-year-old from Long Beach, Calif., has entered since she finished high school and turned pro. Miss Baugh has placed second twice in the first six tournaments and already has won about $9,000.

Although the young golfer said her putts weren't dropping in Thursday's pro-am event, she was hoping to notch her first tournament victory this weekend. She predicted a six-under-par 213 would win.

Miss Baugh was paired with veterans Betty Burfeindt, who won last week's Child and Family Services Open in Wadsworth, Ill., and Carol Mann in today's first round of the 54-hole tournament.

Miss Burfeindt shot a seven-under-par 212 last weekend to win her first tournament in more than a year. Miss Baugh tied for second with Debbie Austin at 215.

The top four LPGA 1973 money winners were entered in the St. Paul tournament—Judy Rankin ($53,637), Kathy Whitworth ($47,540), Miss Burfeindt ($42,950) and Miss Mann ($41,748).

Miss Whitworth has slumped in recent weeks and failed to make the money in the Child and Family Services Open last week, but the other three have been playing some of their best golf of the year.

In Thursday's handicapped pro-am, two teams tied for the low score. The teams captained by Gloria Ehret and Diane Patterson turned in a best ball score of 16-under-par. Sandra Palmer's team finished second at 15-under-par.

Golden Girls in 15-6 win

RIALTO — The Montclair Golden Girls won their second game in the tournament at Rialto, 15-6 over Rialto No. 2.

Kathy La Vallee pitched and batted the Montclair team to its win. Kathy went all the way to record the victory and had two doubles and a single as the Golden Girls scored all their runs in two innings.

Montclair jumped off to a 5-0 lead in the first inning. Rialto came back with one in the last of the first and five more in the third to take a 6-5 lead. But Montclair erupted for 10 runs in the seventh.

Kathie La Vallee drove in the tieing run with a double and Pat Neal doubled in what actually was the winning run.

Montclair plays the winner of the Colton-Corona game at 8:30 p.m. tonight at Rialto's Lilac Field.

Court won't impede Pads

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Supreme Court refused Thursday to impede plans of the San Diego Padres baseball team to move to Washington, D.C.

The high court denied a request of the city of San Diego that the proposed transfer be blocked. The court made no comment on denying the city a hearing on the matter.

City officials had appealed the case to the state's highest tribunal after San Diego County Superior Judge Eli H. Levenson denied an injunction against the move. The city contended the judge erred when he ruled that monetary damages were sufficient to compensate for loss of a major league team.

The Padres franchise to remain in San Diego extends through 1988.

Bass cleared on pot charge

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Dick Bass, former star running back of the Los Angeles Rams, and a friend, Barbara Ann Price, 27, were cleared Wednesday of possession of marijuana charges.

Superior Court Judge George M. Dell ordered the charges dismissed after Bass, 35, and Miss Price completed a county drug rehabilitation program for first time offenders.

Bass and Miss Price were arrested at Bass' apartment June 19, 1972, by officers investigating reports that the former football star was growing marijuana on his patio. Officers said they found more than 20 marijuana plants.

Ecology starts on front lawn

"Ecology", an obscure word only a few years ago, is alive with meaning today as man strives better to adjust himself to his surroundings. Ecology signifies harmonious adjustment to the environment. where, but outside the front door on the lawn, is there a better chance to witness ecology so close up?

A simple case might be the battle between improved grass varieties competing with volunteer grass. If absolutely nothing is done, — the lawn left unmowed and unfertilized, — volunteer stuff usually wins out. But even modest attention (regular mowing and occasional feeding) gives the elite grasses the upper hand These varieties are chosen for modern lawn conditons, and are more persistent than their older counterparts because of resistance to disease.

Subtle interactions occur as well. When Kentucky blue grasses are mixed with fine fescues (a typical lawnseed blend), the bluegrass will generally dominate the turf if the lawn is irrigated and fertilized. On the other hand the fescue may dominate if the lawn is starved and let dry out. One reason for including fescues in a bluegrass blend is that fescue generally hangs on in dry and poor soil sites and in the shade, typical grass invironment under trees.

Where several varieties of the same species are planted together, insurance against loss of a "pure stand", one or another variety may become top dog, and there may be switches depending on weather.

For example, when Merion and Fylking blue grasses were planted together at Rutgers University, Merion was the more aggressive initally, but yielded to Fylking after several years when stripe smut showed up.

Most of the new varieities are low growing, desper at a low mowing height than were their older counterparts. Thus blue grass varieties like Baron, Fylking nad Pennstar may be able to hold up when interseeded with a normally low-clipped grass like Highland bent.

Dr. Fults' research in Colorado affords dramatic evidence of how the lawn population can be manipulated through management of its ecology. Over a period of years weedy truf plantings (even ones into which perennial grasses were sown) have been changed to relatively pure stands of Kentucky blue grass. Generous fertilization, expecially in autumn, is a key measure. Relatively high mowing helps, too. Of course herbicides greatly quicken the succession away from broadleaf weeds.

Lawn seeding can begin at the Canadian border (and at high altitudes) as early as mid-August. Winter comes about one week later for each 100 miles southward (or thousand foot drop in elevation).

Forest geneticists say today's trees are as primitive as corn was in the year 3000 B.C., with an even greater potential for improvement as a crop.

THE JAPANESE MAPLE — This small tree has a variety of garden uses. It may be used for light share, but excels more as a focal point in the landscape, or as a featured specimen in a container—such as the Variety Burgandy Lace pictured here.

Plan now for next spring by planting flower bulbs

"Environment is another word for backyard, and back yards are the best place to start beuatifying the world we live in. Right now is the best time to start, for fall is the time to plant flowerbulbs that bring lively, vibrant color to the garden next spring.

Tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, crocuses and many other "minor bulbs are the living keys to a beautiful spring environment, and all are easy to plant and care for. Spring-flowering bulbs belong in every place around the home—in the backyard, along a lawn, by a path or a hedge, in garden beds and borders.

All it takes to make this "home improvement are flower bulbs and a free afternoon this fall. The bulbs are available by mid-September, in a wide range of colors, shapes and sizes. A free afternoon should be arranged a day well before the first heavy frost.

After a few hours spent planting bulbs, its surprising to see how simple "beautification can be. And a few hours spent telling neighbors about bulb gardening may make your area the most attractive environment around.

What to plant

It is possible to have fowers in bloom during the entire spring season by planting a selection of different kinds of bulbs. Some Dutch bulbs, like crocus, will bloom in March.

Just by planting different classes of tulips, you can have them in bloom from late March to late May. Daffodils and hyacinths will blossom in mid-April to early May.

Select your bulbs to have flowers blooming in sequence. Depending on local weather conditions, the bulb-blooming season will start in late February or early March.

The time to plant

Bulbs must be planted in the fall. Once nestled in the ground, flower bulbs will start developing roots until stopped by heavy winter freeze. Bulbs may be planted up until the time the ground freezes so solid that it cannot be dug.

In warmer southern chimates, bulb planting should be delayed until late November or December. They should also be placed in a shaded location and given ample water.

How deep to plant

Larger bulbs—such as tulips, daffodils and hyacinths—should be planted six to eight inches deep and six inches apart. Species tulips—such as Foteriana, Kaufmanniana, etc.—are planted only four to eight inches deep. crocus, Galnthus, Muscari and other "little' bulbs are planted three inches deep and three inches apaart.

Set the bulbs firmly in place with the pointed ends up. Cover with soil and water well. Bulbs like soil that drains well and does not puddle. Heavy clay soil can be improved by mixing in sand or peatmoss to a depth of 12 to 18 inches.

In warmer climates it has been found that bulbs do best when planted at a depth of four inches. (Research proves that the soil is cooler at that depth, which is what the bulb wants.)

Tulips

The Dutch have developed many new varieties of tulips, and it is possible to have them bloom for ten weeks when care is taken to plant some from each of the different classes. As one class reaches it peak, the next is already preparing to burst into bloom.

Tulips show off their beauty best when planted in clumps of a dozen or more. One or two by themseves (or a straight row), look lost and lonely. They will do well in sun or shade. In fact, those palnted in shady areas wil have a longer blooming period.

Those with the classic "tulip" shapes—Triumph, Darwin, Cottage—are especially suited for planting in garden beds and borders. Early-blooming species tulips, which from 4 to 12 inches tall, are more effective in a casual planting such as rock gardens or semi-naturalistic areas. The lacy-petaled Parrots, Lily-flowering varieties, peony-shaped Doubles, and the large Darwin Hybrids, are dramatic flowers which should be planted where they can be the center of interest.

Hyacinths

Hyacinths belong in every spring garden. They have stately beauty and the unparalleled "fragrance of spring." A complete bed is a welcome addition to any landsape. Or, plant them in groups of a dozen or more (of the same color) in and among the shrubs around the house. They will give color before most other plants bloom.

In addition to white, soft pastel blue and pink colors, modern varieites come in exciting strong shades—red, deep purple, yellow and orange are a few examples. Whatever colors you choose, three or four dozen hyacinth bulbs planted this fall near an entrance or window will give the house a sweet fragrance next spring.

Daffodils

Golden yellow daffodils nodding in the sun are one of the long-remembered sights of spring. But this fall, consider other daffodils in addition to the familiar large yellow Trumpet types.

Daffodils now come in a large assortment of colors and delicate color combinations. Pink and lime are just two examples. On some varieties, orange-red cups are contrasted with yellow or pure white petals. Others sport double flowers—twice as many petals as the Trumpet varieties.

Daffodils can be naturalized—planted in random patterns and irregular drifts—in a field, along a row of shrubs, or even on a lawn.

The lovely minor bulbs are prized by gardeners for thier habit of ushering in spring well ahead of the calendar. Many will burst into bloom even before other harbingers of spring.

They give the spark of life and color to the wintery landscape. Their names tell the role they play in the late winter garden: Snowdrop (Galanthus) and Glory of the Snow (Chionodoxa) are two examples.

Minor bulbs are quire hardy and once planted they take care of themselves with little or no attention, blooming year after year. For their best effect, most should be planted in large quantities.

Crocus, galanthus, chionodoxa are among the earliest to flower. Others bloom later.

Now is the time to plan and plant next spring's bulb garden. It's the most civilized way of getting back to nature.

Grow plants in containers for effect

Nineteenth century Europeans would turn green with envy today, if they could see how Califronia gardeners are featuring a fantastic number of plants in an equally fantastinctive containers was contic array of containers.

Growing plants in distinctive containers was considered a new fashion in gardening, as recent as the 1950s, though Europeans popularized it over a century ago.

Plants in containers make delightful decorations and serve as accessories throughout the garden, porch, patio and deck. They are charming combinations at the entryway, to greet guests and add sparkle to the appearance of the home. Thanks to the portability of plants in containers, it's possible to create new garden effects in minutes, or move your garden wherever you go or entertain—just as you would do with living room furniture. Culture-wise, plants in tubs make it possible to control moisture, exposure and soil, so the gardener can enjoy a variety of plants which ordinarily wouldn't flouish in a particular situation, or location.

Almost any plant that grows can be featured in a container: Shrubs, many trees, flowering specimens, including roses; plus succulents, bulbs, herbs, and dwarf citurs. Such shallow-rooted performers as azaleas, camellias and rhododendrons are splendid candidates for growing in tubs.

Nurseries offer a wide variety of containers—some traditional in design, others with contemporary appeal, and yet additional ones that are futuristic, or far-out, in imagination and appearance. In addition to redwood and pottery containers, craftsmen have developed planting contrivances in other materials.

Several inexpensive summer-flowering annuals planted in a deep, wide terra cotta saucer creation look like a million dollars. Combining succulents with dwarf marigolds, ageratum or zinnias in a Mexican pottery container adds cheer to any setting.

A wax leaf privet, clipped and shaped into a pyramid or topiary, and featured in an urn, exudes formality. Plant the same item in a redwood tub and the creation lends itself to informal settings. Either way, the beauty is distinctive.

Creating setting? look to Japanese

The European and American approach to gardens is to provide trees and shrubs as a background for flowring plants. A garden without color would be almost unthinkable. Not so in the Japanese garden. Trees and shrubs are used as individual specimens and may represent a natural scene reminiscent of a family trip into the country, or a visit to a famous shrine.

The Japanese use props of gravel, stone and water as foils for trees and shrubs, which leads to an effect that remains stable through every season of the year. The water may be a quiet pool, or a trickling stream. There may be no water at all — and, instead, rocks and stones arranged to represent a dried-up stream.

There are many approaches one may take to create a Japanese garden; whichever is taken, there are several trees and shrubs that are naturals for the situation.

The Japanese maple is a small tree with a variety of garden uses. It may be used to shade a bank of azaleas, stand by itself as the focal point of the garden, or be featured in a container. "Threadleaf" varieties are lower-growing types with gracefully spreading branches. With both types, there is a choice of red or green foliage. Leaves fall in winter to reveal eye-appealing silhouettes of slender branches.

Pines are almost essential to a Japanese garden. The Japanese black pine is popular, so is the Austraian Black Pine — as well as the dwarf Mugho Pine.

An airy touch is added by planting clumps of heavenly bamboo (Nandina). Slender branches support compound leaves of soft green, bronzy or pinkish when young. A compact variety remains lower and is an excellent choice where a modest grower is needed.

Don't loverlook oriental magnolias, particularly soulangeana forms (saucer magnolia), which may be pruned to a desired height and spread. Saucer-shaped blooms appear just ahead of the foliage and produce a remarkable show from Februaty to May.

There are many ground covers to use in a Japanese garden setting. Tufts of mondo grass, Scotch or Irish moss add interest at ground level. Japanese spurge is a dark leafy performer that fills in nicely and looks good every day of the year.
